THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 1900.

It is probably a false report that W. J. Bryan is to assume editorial management of a paper to be started at Washington City by W. R. Hearst. Bryan repeats his determination to remain in Lincoln and keep up his political fight.

President Kruger of the Transvaal has been given a most enthusiastic welcome on his recent journey through France and sympathy for the Boers has been shown by the masses of the French people. The authorities of France, however, have avoided any anti-British expressions.

Ex-Candidate Bryan was in Chicago Saturday to consult with Chairman Towne in regard to matters which he would not divulge. Aside from proclaiming his determination to stick to the political arena, he would not discuss the future policy of the democratic party.

According to the annual report of Indian Commissioner Jones the Indian population of the United States has not been decreasing with the advance of civilization as has been generally believed. He reports that there are now 267,900 Indians, showing an increase of 28,394 since 1890.

From 1890 to 1900 Nebraska increased in population 10,000. In the same period Ohio increased almost 1,000,000. The increase is proportional in other respects. Now that Nebraska has repudiated Populism and its great High Priest she may be expected to dart forward and up a better record in the race for position.—Eugene Register.

Doubtless all have ample reasons for feelings or expressions of gratitude on this Thanksgiving day. There have been bountiful harvests, lively business for tradesmen, plenty of employment for all and sufficient money in circulation, with which to meet the needs of the country. Prosperity seems to have prevailed universally. Thus there is good ground for joy, feasting and thanksgiving. If there are cases of need or destitution, let them be made happy on this occasion from the abundance of their more fortunate neighbors.

Nebraska has undergone a most favorable change in political sentiment in the last few years as shown by the result of the recent election, and among the rest of the counties which have turned former democratic majorities to good-sized republican victories we are gratified to see the county in which we resided. This shows that the hosts of vociferous populists who used to clamor for free silver and Bryan, have changed to an appreciation of the prosperous times and wish to perpetuate them, becoming more optimistic and relegating to the precincts of oblivion their former despairing key notes of calamity and pessimism.

President McKinley was given an enthusiastic reception in Philadelphia last Saturday and addressed a gathering at a banquet under the auspices of the Union League, of which he was a guest. In the course of his remarks, he spoke of the purport of the late republican victory and among other utterances gave expression to the following brief climax: "It records the unquestionable indorsement of the gold standard, industrial dependence, broader markets, commercial expansion, reciprocal trade, the open door in China, the inviolability of the public faith, the independence and authority of the judiciary, and peace and beneficent government under American sovereignty in the Philippines."

BONANZA.

Messrs. Clopton, Lowderbaugh, Hamaker, Bradburn, Walker, and Van Riper returned from Portland November 23d.

Mr. Beckholdt has finished his new house in the eastern part of town and is now occupying the same. He has a new barn almost completed.

Mr. Wm. Goss has sold his ranch one and a half miles from here to Mr. Cornwall.

A Merrill hunter says the meanest man on the Pacific Coast lives near Bonanza. He is a rancher west of here. A few days ago he killed a big grey squirrel, and after skinning it stuffed the hide and fastened it securely to the limb of a big tree. When the Merrill hunter came along he shot away all his ammunition but the squirrel remained in the tree. He then climbed up to the squirrel's perch, and when he saw the joke he was so hot that he burned a hole in his pants sliding down the tree. He left the squirrel for the next hunter.

Alex. Zevely went to the Falls last Tuesday to bring H. P. Galarneau to Bonanza to do some work on the interior of his saloon.

Hugh Clopton is moving into his new store.

Jesse Helms is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Kinsman, for a short time.

DEMAND FOR TIMBER.

[Oregon Timberman.]
Wm. H. Mills, of San Francisco, Calif., land agent of the Central Pacific Railway Company, contributes to the Timberman, under date of October 18, the following opinion regarding the future value of timber lands on the Pacific coast. Mr. Mills has just recently returned from Paris, where his company made a most comprehensive exhibit of the timber interests of Oregon and California. Mr. Mills says:

"We have raised the price of our timber land and have made several sales during the past week. In the presence of a first-class market, which is carrying off the timber at an astonishing rate, there is very little encouragement to advertise. In fact my own opinion is, and that opinion is based upon extensive observation of the conditions of the forests of the United States and Europe, that a great market is rising for the timber lands of California and Oregon."

"We succeeded in advertising them most effectively by the exhibit we made in Paris, and some very extensive operations will be transferred from Southern Russia to the Pacific coast. I also had the pleasure of meeting one of the most extensive manufacturers of lumber in Italy and called his attention effectively to the forests of this country."

"When this market rises, it is going to be very sudden, and I think it is very rapidly approaching. There will be a demand for the timber lands of California, Oregon and Washington, such as we have not before encountered. There are economic reasons for this. They are not merely speculative. They are based upon the actual facts as they exist. The world's supply of timber is very nearly exhausted as is the supply of all things which the world has depended upon nature to produce the supply. They plant timber in Germany, but this is no remedy for the present relation of supply and demand. Timber grows very slowly in any country and the forests of Germany do not begin to supply their own country. All nations are importers. England imported from the United States in 1899 $22,000,000 of timber, hewn and squared. This year the amount will rise to $30,000,000 and will go on increasing. France will be an importer of lumber from America. Already one of the largest concerns in Paris has visited San Francisco as the result of the exhibit made, and has sent a cargo of redwood lumber to France."

CENTER OF POPULATION.

[St. Louis Globe-Democrat.]
The population center of the United States is not traveling westward as fast as formerly, but it is still traveling. In 1900 it is located at Columbus, Ind. This is a movement of about 20 miles in the past 10 years, or since 1890. Between 1890 and 1899 the movement westward was 48 miles. The shortest shifting which the center point made in any decade except from 1890 to 1900 was that which took place between 1880 and 1890, which was 36 miles. The average westward movement in a decade has been about 50 miles. The line of movement has always been along or near the 39th parallel, a line which passes not far from Baltimore, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Denver and San Francisco.

As described by the Census Bureau, the center of population is "the center of gravity" of the country's inhabitants, "each individual being assumed to have the same weight and to press downward with a force proportional to his distance from the center." That is to say, the mass of inhabitants increases in weight in proportion to the length of its removal from the central point. The concentration of population in New York and Philadelphia on the one side, and in San Francisco and Portland, Or., on the other, counts for more in balance than if the former were deposited in Ohio or Michigan or the latter were laid down in Missouri or Iowa. The shifting of the population center is determined in a large degree by the distribution of the units of the inhabitants which are located east and west of that point, respectively.

Relatively to the expansion of the East in the past ten years the growth of the West has been much slower than it was the previous decades. Manufacturing attracts population more strongly than does commerce, and of course, far more strongly than does agriculture of any sort, and the East is growing more rapidly in manufactures than the West. This order of things may change in the future, and probably will change in a considerable degree. The Pacific Coast is certain to develop its manufactures in the next ten years, as a consequence of the opening in the Asiatic trade which is being made for the country. The Central West is making great strides in manufacturing of all kinds. Though the star of the empire is not traveling toward sunset as rapidly as it moved in earlier days, it has not yet halted, and is not likely to halt soon.

SAINT NICK IN THE FLESH.

"Saint Nick comes to every Moravian child in the town of Emmaus, Pennsylvania, on Christmas eve," writes Camillus Phillips in the December Ladies' Home Journal. "With great racket Peltznickel (as they call our Saint Nick) breaks into each kitchen door and appears before the expectant children and their elders. A great coat envelops him from head to foot. The lower part of his face is concealed by a bushy white beard. The upper part is disguised in a mask. Over his shoulder hangs an enormous wool sack, and in its sides the bundles bulge. His left hand grips the mouth of the bag; his right hand holds a long switch. No words says the Peltznickel for the moment, and no sound came from any of those upon whom he has burst so suddenly. For a moment he menaces the old folks with his switch to show that all, old as well as young, are beneath his sway on Christmas eve. Relenting, he swings around to the children on the sofa with a Moloch air that turns the innocents cold. Up goes the switch. They tell him they have been dutiful to church and Sunday school and recite their prayers. A little time elapses after prayer has been spoken. The Peltznickel, who has been as quietly reverent as the rest, gives the signal for tumult by scattering on the floor, with a generous hand, home-made candies. In a flash the children are on their knees gathering the delicious largesse, while the Peltznickel laying on the switch anew, teaches them life's insistent lesson, that there is no pleasure to be won without pain."

THE IRI R. HICKS 1901 ALMANAC.

Whatever may be said of the scientific causes upon which the Rev. I. R. Hicks bases his yearly forecasts of storm and weather, it is a remarkable fact that specific warnings of every great storm, flood, cold wave and drought, have been plainly printed in his now famous Almanac for many years. The latest startling proof of this fact was the destruction of Galveston, Texas, on the very day named by Prof. Hicks in his 1900 Almanac, as one of disaster by storm along the gulf coasts. The 1901 Almanac, by far the finest, most complete and beautiful yet published, is now ready. This remarkable book of near two hundred pages, splendidly illustrated with charts and half-tone engravings, goes as a premium to every subscriber who pays one dollar a year for Prof. Hicks' journal, WORD AND WORKS. The Almanac alone is sent prepaid for only 25 cents. Order from WORD AND WORKS Publishing Company, 2291 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.

APPLE ORCHARDS.

[Oregonian.]
Apple growers of the state ought to take courage. Devices whereby the ravages of the codlin moth and other apple tree pests may be overcome, and practically have been overcome, while the demand for Oregon apples increases every year, both in home and the Eastern markets. "No crop," says the Lebanon Criterion, "is surer if properly handled, and no crop pays better than good Winter apples. Besides, the growing does not interfere to any great extent with the ordinary farm work." It seems superfluous to add that "more apple orchards should be planted, and that at once."

American credit is unimpaired, the honor of the American flag unassailed, and the obligations of a righteous war and treaty of peace unrepudiated."

Bryan erred in expressing his sympathies for the Filipino rebels who are firing on our soldiers and our flag in the Philippines. The argument with which he surrounded his "anti-imperialistic paramount," seemed solely to breathe compassion for the rebels and sorrowful apprehension for their future welfare. Few doubt that the Filipinos will be infinitely better off under the sovereignty of the United States than they ever have been or ever could be under absolute self-government. Bryan could have made a better anti-expansion case by showing the possible danger to American character in the permanent acquisition of a multitudinous mixture of semi-savages. He could have reviewed the history of other nations which have weakened and crumbled through excess of expansion. But thoughts of the future of this country seemed to be swallowed up in his passionate appeal for the liberty of the Filipinos, who are practically free now and a huge majority of whom are anxious to accept the guiding hand of the United States. Many republicans express themselves as conscientiously doubtful about the propriety of permanently hitching the islands to this country, but they will stand loyally by the administration in the performance of its duty in restoring order and establishing a stable government in the Philippines, and if the events of future years show that the islands can be released with safety, humanity and honor, they will be glad to see them cut loose and allowed to drift for themselves. They are bitterly opposed to the inflammatory methods of Bryan and his anti-imperialistic rot, saying nothing of their disgust over his free silver vagaries, his inconsistency in reference to trusts and his persistent efforts to excite prejudices and array one class against another. In his wild and reckless plunge, Bryan seemed unable to extract reason or consistency out of a single plank in the democratic platform. As to the Philippine question, people propose to see the policy of the administration carried out and refrain from kicking until there are just grounds for it.

TWO WOMEN'S MUNIFICENT GIFTS

The total amount devoted by two California women to the cause of higher education on the Pacific Coast is at least $25,000,000. These two women, the widows of Western pioneers who became millionaires, are Mrs. Jane L. Stanford and Mrs. Phoebe Hearst. The former's gifts to the Leland Stanford Junior University of California, at Palo Alto, Calif., exceeds $16,000,000, and Mrs. Hearst who has already given large sums to the University of California at Berkeley, is like Mrs. Stanford, constantly increasing the institution's obligations to her generosity.—December Ladies' Home Journal.
