The wheels of the Oregon legislature will begin to revolve next month. We would suggest as a means of hastening proceedings that the entire state statutes be booted into the Willamette river and new ones made and adopted.

Less greed for material wealth and more individual charity, honesty and integrity are needed to improve the quality of men and women. Friendships are too often based on the prospects of gaining money or favor and the garb of sordid selfishness seems to be growing more impervious to high ideals and the noble attributes of sincere fellowship.

The current number of the Ladies' Home Journal contains an article forecasting the changes and improvements that will have taken place by the end of another century. The advancement predicted is doubtless no less probable than the attainments of the nineteenth century would have seemed one hundred years ago. The prophecy does not mention the probable condition of the newspaper in 2001. With the rest of its predictions it might have said with equal reason that the country newspapers will decrease in number and greatly increase in quality. There is sure to be a growing tendency to fewer papers and better ones. Less than a hundred years hence, a county of 50,000 people will likely support not to exceed two papers, which will represent fully and impartially every part of its territory. Individuals like the youth whose father, according to Carlton, wanted to make an editor out of him because he wasn't worth a pleasure for anything else, will probably not have the audacity to even tackle newspaper journalism.

THANKSGIVING DAY AT POE VALLEY.

[Contributed.]
Thanksgiving day will long be remembered by the people of Poe Valley. On that day the neighbors and friends of Rev. J. B. Griffith gathered at the school house and gave him a beautiful secretary as a token of their respect and appreciation. Music, speeches and a sumptuous dinner were the features of the program.

The crowd began to assemble at 10:30 o'clock and by 11:15 the school house was filled to its utmost capacity. The Poe Valley choir sang two anthems beautifully, the first being the "Lord's Prayer" and the second, "The Lord is my Salvation." The next two selections were from the Pentecostal Hymns—"Standing on the Promises" and "We Shall Stand Before the King."

Edward Fruer had been chosen to do honor to Rev. Griffith in presenting the secretary. Mr. Fruer is a fluent talker and his words were impressive and to the point. Rev. Griffith said, in response, that words failed to express his gratitude and appreciation to the good people of Poe Valley for such a token of their respect. He gave an able and eloquent discourse, and in closing spoke of the numberless poor and streeturchins in the great cities who are remembered on Thanksgiving day by charitable people.

After the benediction, well filled baskets were brought forth and their tempting contents nicely arranged on two 24-foot tables. It was a genuine feast for all.
The Bonanza photographer took a picture of the tables, and after dinner took a picture of the merry crowd in a group. Any one wishing a picture can see a sample at the Bedford post-office and leave orders with Mrs. Pfannstiel, the post-mistress.

TO THE CITIZENS.

KENO, ORE., Dec. 3d, 1900.
ED. REPUBLICAN, Klamath Falls: As the time for the convening of the Oregon Legislature is near at hand I desire to invite the people of Klamath county through the columns of your paper to acquire time with any matter they desire me to look after in their interest during the coming session of the Legislature.

They are invited to write me or see me at my home or call a meeting at the court house and I will attend. Thanking the people of Klamath for the confidence they voted toward me by their votes last June, I am Respectfully Yours, R. A. ENMITT.

POPULATION OF KLAMATH COUNTY

According to the report of the last census of the counties in Oregon, Klamath county comes out with flying colors. This county at the time of the census of ten years ago, (1890), had a population of 2444. The census of last June, (1900) shows a population of 3970. There has therefore been a gain during the past ten years, of 1526. As will be seen, the increase over and above the population of 1890, is 62 per cent. The per cent of gain during that time of the entire state, being 31 per cent, the growth of Klamath county is double that of the state. Such an increase of population as is shown in Klamath county, would not be surprising in an eastern state county, where there were railroads to bring in settlers and their families and goods, but here, remote as we are from railroads, and with long and difficult mountain roads to overcome by proposed settlers, the increase must be deemed very great. Yet under all the difficulties of hard travel and much expense, the county has actually bowed ahead in the matter of population, 1526. This growth is much greater than has been had in any of the neighboring counties. Thus Crook county has increased 746 in ten years. Harney county's increase has been 37, and Lake county adds 243. On the west, Jackson county which in 1890 had 11,450, has increased during the 10-years about 17 per cent. Thus Klamath county has a far greater per cent of growth than any, or indeed, all of the neighboring counties combined. The figures showing the increase from 1890 to this time are taken from the Oregonian published November 28, and are correct without doubt. All this is very encouraging to Klamath county. If we can soon have railroad communication with the outside world so that people can get here without great trouble and expense, it may confidently be predicted that the next ten years will see the present population doubled several times over. It would not be surprising in the least if Klamath county in 1910 had from 15,000 to 20,000 inhabitants.

LOOKING FOR HOMES.

[Oregonian.]
A large number of homeseekers are now arriving in Portland, and many of the hotels are filled with them. They come principally from the Dakotas, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa and Kansas, though all the Mississippi Valley States contribute more or less to their number. They are mostly of the farming class and the heads of the families are usually provided with means to purchase land when they get around to it.

The beginning of Winter is considered a good time to come West, as harvest is over, the grain sold and arrangements made to sell their lands back there, while the owners are looking over Oregon and Washington with a view to locating permanently where people do not freeze to death in Winter nor are roasted in the Summer.

The homeseekers' rate that prevailed several months ago is largely responsible for this heavy immigration now, though the present rates westward are lower than usual. Farmer who came to Oregon last year and saw the bountiful crops harvested beneath a kindly sun, that never made the farm hands uncomfortable, were impressed favorably with the state, and so went back resolved to arrange their affairs and give the Coast a genuine trial.

Among the newcomers is W. H. Rogers, of Sedgewick City, Kan. * * * He has been considerably over the state, however, and has found that the chances for the farmer of small means are much better here than in Kansas. "There are splendid opportunities in Oregon," he said, yesterday. "For a man with $500 to $1000 to invest, as he can buy the making of a fine home with that amount. Land is valuable in Kansas, and a quarter section cannot be purchased for less than $5000 to $6000. I have not sold my farms back there yet, but I anticipate no trouble in disposing of them while times are as good as they are now. However, good farms can be rented out for cash in Kansas, the rent ranging from $400 to $500 per quarter section, collectible in four payments.

"Crops have been very good in Kansas this year, and prices have been fair, so agriculture is flourishing there, but I don't like the hard Winters nor the hot Summers. I can stand the cold better than I can the heat. Oregon should be better advertised in the East than it is. If the people of my part of Kansas knew what a paradise you had out here, they would all be coming out. Good crops are not the rule every year in Kansas, and so times are not always as prosperous as now. I think now is a good time to move, while lands are in brisk demand back there.

"Kansas people are in ignorance of Oregon's fertility and resources." We hear only of Oregon being a state where it rains six months out of the twelve, and yet I've been here four weeks of the wet season, and have not found anything to dread. The warm, gentle showers give much enjoy-and they are not yet been frequent enough to cause inconvenience.

"Oregon should send literature to every postoffice in Kansas, describing the real conditions here. In this way, your state would soon be populated by farmers who would be glad to take up the unoccupied lands, or to buy homes in the pretty valleys, where there is now so much room. A good many of my neighbors will come on next Spring, as I have taken pains to acquaint them with conditions here."
