VICTIM OF WILD IMAGINATION.

From Oregonian.

Hank Jones, an old trapper who passed through Portland some months ago, on his way from Idaho to the Klamath country to engage in the business of extirpating coyotes for the sake of the bounty paid for the scalps of these pestiferous animals, arrived here Saturday on his way back to Idaho a very much disgusted man. He said from what he had seen in the Oregon papers in regard to the number of coyote scalps which had been turned in and bounties paid on, he had imagined that he could make a fortune in the Klamath region in one season. The number of coyotes he saw running over the cattle ranges when he got into Klamath county encouraged him in his idea, and he hastened to set all his traps. The first night he caught several coyotes, but was astonished to find that only one of them had a scalp. The others were baldheaded—that is, like old Uncle Ned, they had no hair on the top of the head in the place where the hair ought to grow. He could not understand this, but said nothing and went on with his trapping. While he was in Klamath county he caught dozens of coyotes, about 75 per cent of which were baldheaded, and some had a new scalp partially grown. He finally began to inquire what was the matter with the coyotes in that section. He found that while the sheepmen were anxious to have the coyotes killed off, and had secured the passage of the bounty law, the cattlemen wished the coyotes preserved in order that they might kill off the sheep and leave the range grass for cattle. The cowboys employed by the cattlemen had worked to this end by running down and lassoing coyotes and ripping their scalps off and allowing them to go at large. The coyotes suffered but little from the loss of their scalps, and, finding that after they had yielded them up they were allowed to frequent the cattle ranges without being molested, and to grow fat on mutton, they soon grasped the situation and began to come in and be scalped when hot weather set in. A new scalp grows on the bald heads in one season, and they all come in to be scalped, and the cowboys are getting rich on bounties, while the number of coyotes keeps increasing. Mr. Jones says that unless the bounty law is repealed every cowboy in that region will be a millionaire and the state will be bankrupt in a few years. If any one doubts this statement, he is assured that Mr. Jones is an honest man—in fact, he has long been known in that part of Idaho where he resides as "Honest Jones."

THREE MEN INDICTED FOR LYNCHING IN MODOC.

Yreka Journal:

The Grand Jury, which adjourned last Wednesday, after having investigated the Lookout lynchings, returned three indictments for murder. Robert Leventon, Isom Eades and James W. Brown, are the persons named. The indictments charge these three men with the murder of Martin Wilson, the thirteen-year-old son of old Mary Wilson, the squaw. "Old Mary," as she was called, was formely the wife of Calvin Hall, by whom she had one son, James, who was lynched with his father, his brother, Frank Hall, young Martin Wilson and Dan Yantis. The evidence against the three indicted men is said to be much stronger in the case of Martin Wilson than in the case of the other four men lynched.

Robt. Leventon is a blacksmith in Lookout. He is a brother-in-law of Deputy Constable J. W. Brown, another man charged with the murder. Brown lives in Lookout and has not a very savory reputation. Isom Edes is a squaw man, living on a ranch about six miles from Lookout.

It is understood that evidence was brought out by the Grand Jury investigation showing that Leventon, Brown and Eades were the principal participants in the events leading up to the lynching. Hail was twice strung up to the rafter of a barn, but the rope broke. Isom Eades then struck him with a six-shooter.

Hall told his Indian friends of the assault, and they have been preparing to avenge him ever since the lynching. They gave out warning some days ago that if the Grand Jury failed to punish Eades and two others, the Indians themselves would take a hand at administering justice.

Leventon, Brown and Eades have made no attempt to escape, and it is believed will stand a trial in the expectation that no evidence will be brought against them, as participants in the lynching cannot be compelled to give testimony that might incriminate themselves.

The Sheriff has arrested the three men indicted, and placed them in jail without bail, to await trial. It is also claimed that the Grand Jury found several more indictments, and that further arrests will follow soon.

THE RAILROAD

Speaking of the report which we published two weeks ago that iron and rolling stock had already been purchased for the railroad from Klamathon to Klamath Falls, and that the contract for grading was to be let at once, the Express of last week says: "We do not know that it is necessary to make any comment concerning the above, but will say that such information as we were possessed of was not imparted for publication, but so long as it has been published, deem it not improper to confirm same and state that not only has iron and rolling stock been purchased but that undoubtedly grading will commence in less than sixty days. While our information is not second-hand, we are not at liberty to state more."

A surgical operation is not necessary to cure piles. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve saves all that expense and never fails. Beware of counterfeits.
