TRIP TO WOOD RIVER.

A trip to Klamath River, Fort Klamath and the Wood River country, is one which those who admire magnificent scenery cannot afford to miss.

The Wood river country is one of the most favored spots which nature ever kinder us. And the time will come not long hence when that country will be crowded with people, and Wood river and Big Klamath lakes will be celebrated as summer resorts by tourists everywhere.

THE INDIAN CELEBRATION.

The one hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of American independence and the first of the twentieth century was duly celebrated in grand and appropriate style by the various tribes of Indians of the Klamath Agency.

The procession, led and conducted by Charley Pitt, grand marshal of the day, and his aids, formed at old Ft. Klamath and marched to their celebration grounds on the beautiful, grassy banks of the crystal stream of water known as Wood river.

The exercises were opened with a patriotic and eloquent prayer by the Rev. Mr. Fysh.

PICNIC AT BONANZA

The fun-loving citizens of Bonanza celebrated the 4th of July in good old fashioned style. The town was practically deserted. All bled to the river at nearest gap, about 3 1/2 miles from town, where a royal good time was enjoyed. A dinner was spread "fit for a king," and ice cream and ice cold lemonade were served in abundance.

AT NIGHT WE CAMPED ON THE BANK OF WILKINSON RIVER.

This is a wide and beautiful river of pure water and on either side is shaded by a fringe of trees. We were on the Klamath Indian reservation, and on every hand good farms and comfortable houses were seen. The inhabitants seemed to be absent, as in fact they were, to attend the Fourth of July celebration at old Fort Klamath the next day.

From the Agency we went along excellent roads, through green fields and attractive groves, to old Fort Klamath where the celebration was to be held.

The Agency was a lively military post when a regiment of soldiers was stationed there, especially lively and busy when the Indian war was on. Here also took place the final close of that tragedy by the trial and execution of the chiefs of the rebellion. But now, most of the buildings have been abandoned and are rapidly going to decay.

During the day we had the pleasure of briefly seeing the new town of Fort Klamath, which is about a mile from the old Fort. It is a pleasant town with progressive citizens, and in the near future will be of much importance. It will also be at the head of navigation, as by means of Wood river, steamboats with little labor be enabled to go to Fort Klamath from Klamath Falls by the way of the lake.

The second night of our trip we camped in a grove of J. W. McCoy, which, with other groves, decorates his splendid 420 acres of level meadow. His place, like many other places in the Wood river country, looks like an old cultivated and well kept farm in the east where beauty, as well as utility, is considered. And Wood river itself is the most perfect river we have ever seen. The water is deep, clear as crystal and as cold as ice, and to drink it is a health-giving luxury which few have elsewhere enjoyed.
