Its length they were unable to determine, but its enormous head, as it lifted above the water, struck them with overpowersymptoms of the presence of a whale. They did not see the whale itself, but they saw its spout, and hence knew it was there. Doubtless the derson and Fred C. Melhase, county whale and the serpent had been in commissioners, constituting the deadly conflict and hence were so near county court of Klamath, and by A. together. This seemed to be Mr. Duffy's opinion, and also that this was the same great fish which was tion to the Governor, said: stranded sear the mouth of Williamalso, it was the same whale which as the defendant was guilty and Wright. son river several years ago. Possibly, swallowed Jonah.

The travelers arrived at their stopping place at Pelican Bay about sundown, and were made comfortable at Griffith's boteh At the hotel and in tents around it, were about 350 people, all seeking health, enjoyment and frunting and fishing. The bay and the ice-cold streams which emptied into it were so crowded with fish induce them to come ashore. Mr. Duffy tells us that 15-pound trout, with bodies as long as an axe handle, were the most common, and that a was ignored and kicked out of the aristocratic circles of fish society.
