you are a true Christian. You will forgive your uncle when he is dead and gone. I should like to be buried in Guernsey with the other Dobrees." Neither did Julia answer, save by sobs. I stepped towards the window to draw up the blinds, but he stopped me, speaking in a much stronger voice than before.

"Leave them alone," he said. "I have no wish to see the light of day. A dis-to do this day." "Will you marry her before we leave Jersey ?" asked my father.

"Yes," I answered. The word slipped from me almost unwares, yet I did not wish to retract it. She was behaving so nobly and gener-ously towards us both that I was willing to do anything to make her happy. "Then, my love," he said, "you hear what Martin promises. All's well that Colombia has a cabinet crisis on ends well. Only make up your mind to hand.

Masked Men Took a Brute Out of Jail and Hung Him to a Telegraph Pole. TEMS OF INTEREST FROM ALL

Helena, Mont., Oct. 4 .- James Edward Brady, the man who committed an unusually brutal assault upon 5-year-old Ida Pugsley, in Helena, was taken from the jail and hanged to a telegraph pole in the haymarket square, about three blocks from the jail. The crowd was orderly and after the man had been hanged quietly dispersed. There were about 200 men engaged in the affair, and they were all masked. They at tacked the jail door with a battering ram and it soon yielded. On gaining admittance, they demanded the keys Anarchist Johann Most was dis-of the jailer at the point of a gun, and threatened that if he did not yield the man up they would kill him. The jailer then got the man out of his cell and he was given to the mob. When they first took him, Brady asked: "What is it gentlemen?" The march to the hanging place was quiet. Brady was given a chance to say a word. He declared that they had the wrong man, although he had been positively identified by his victim and a score of other people who had seen him with the child. "JULIA." I pondered over Julia's letter as I dressed. There was not a word of re-sentment in it. It was full of affectionate thought for us all. But what rea soning! I had not known Olivia so long as I had known her, therefore I could not love her as truly!

There was no longer any hesitation in my mind as to what I must do. Julia knew all now. I had told her distinctly of my love for Olivia, and she would not belleve it. She appeared wishful to hold me to my engagement in spite of it; at any rate, so I interpreted her letter. did not suppose that I should not live it down, this infatuation, as they chose to call it. I might hunger and thirst, and be on the point of perishing; then my nature would turn to other nutriment, and assimilate it to its contracted and stultified capacities.

I went mechanically through the routine of my morning's work, and it was late in the afternoon before I could get away to ride to the Vale. My mother knew where I was going, and gazed wistfully into my face, but without otherwise asking me any questions. At the last moment, as I touched Madam's bridle, I looked down at her standing on the door-step. "Cheer up, mother!" I said, al-I said, almost gaily, "it will all come right."

I found Julia standing by the fireplace. and leaning against it, as if she could not stand alone. When I went up to her and took her hand, she flung her arms around my neck, and clung to me, in a passion of tears. It was some minutes before she could recover her self-command. I had never seen her abandon herself to such a paroxysm before.

"Julia, my poor girl!" I said, "I did not think you would take it so much to heart as this.'

"I shall come all right directly," she sobbed, sitting down, and trembling from head to foot. "Johanna said you would head to foot. come, but I was not sure."

Yes, I am here," I answered, with a very dreary feeling about me. "That is enough," said Julia; "you need not say a word more. Let us forget it, both of us. You will only give me your promise never to see her or speak to her again "

'before we hate one another. I tell you I have been robbed by the father and jilted by the son. Good-bye, Martin."

"Good-bye, Julia," I replied; but I still lingered, hoping she would speak to me again. I was anxious to hear what she would do against my father. She looked at me fully and angrily, and as I did not move, she swept out of the room, with a dignity which I had never seen in her before. I retreated towards the house door, but could not make good my escape without encountering Johanna. Well, Martin?" she said.

"It is all wrong." I answered. "Julia persists in it that I am jilting her." "All the world will think you have be haved very badly," she said. I rode home again, Sark lying in full view before me; and, in spite of the dark-ness of my prospects. I felt intensely glad to be free to win my Olivia.

Four days passed without any sign from Julia. My father had gone off on a visit and my mother and I had the house to ourselves; and, in spite of her free tings, we enjoyed considerable pleasure during the temporary lull. There were, however, sundry warnings out of doors which foretold tempest. I met cold glances and sharp inquiries from old friends, among whom some rumors of our separation were floating. There was sufficient to justify suspicion-my father's absence, Julia's prolonged sojourn with the Careys, and the postponement of my voyage to England. I began to fancy that even the women servants flouted at me.

Captain Carey looked very much fright ened. He was a man of quick sympa thies, and nervous about his own life into the bargain, so that any serious illness alarmed him. As for myself, I was in miserable condition of mind.

We were not admitted into my father room for half an hour, as he sent word he must get up his strength for the inter view. Julia and myself alone were al lowed to see him. He was propped up
