THE ALTURAS TRIAL.

(San Francisco Call.)

ALTURAS, Jan. 18.—Rage, hatred and excitement were the distinguishing features in the trial of James W. Brown, the alleged lyncher, this afternoon. Superior Judge Harrington, almost beside himself with indignation over the course of counsel for the defense, and seemingly on the verge of a breakdown because of the strain he has been under for the past seven weeks, summarily ordered Witness Claud Morris off the stand and adjourned court without listening to the protests Brown's attorneys were attempting to make. The court was a picture of rage as he excoriated the counsel. He declared he had been driven almost to distraction by the unprofessional conduct of the attorneys representing the alleged lynchers, and that he was "sick and tired of the whole business." It was expected that the examination of Morris would be concluded today, but the abrupt adjournment will result in the young lyncher being recalled on Monday. The case is likely to go to the jury next week.

The defense this morning resumed the cross-examination of Witness Morris. Spencer asked the witness if his father when on his deathbed or at any time after the lynching, had said: "I could die happy if I knew E. S. Trowbridge (the men had been enemies) was one of those lynchers and would hang for it."

Morris replied in the negative. "On the night you met Mr. Baker (one of the counsel for the defense) at Lookout, did you state that Jimmy Boyd (one of the counsel for the prosecution) had gone to your ranch and told your uncle that if you went to Alturas you would be shot, and taking you aside, warned you not to go to Alturas?" he was asked.

"I made that statement in substance. I told Boyd that I had nothing to fear; that I knew nothing of the lynching and that I would go to Alturas."

The defense asked the same question several times as to the different persons present, and the prosecution objected strongly. Judge Harrington sustained objections to the questions. The defense said it wanted to impeach Morris, he having made contrary statements in and out of court. The court said:

"It has been admitted time and time again that the witness had told different parties that he knew nothing of the lynching."

When Morris was asked whether he had not said that Hutton had stepped out of Trowbridge's store on the night of the lynching, the court sustained an objection by the prosecution and opposing counsel began an argument. Arising from the bench the Judge remarked:

"For God's sake, wear yourselves out, and I will take a seat near the stove."

He suited his action to his words. The defense did not leave the question and the court said:

"Counsel is killing time." "We want to impeach the witness," said Baker. "Suppose some one should say that your Honor and I went to a hen roost—"

The court, interrupting: "Well you would get the chickens. I don't like them, and I'm sick of Modoc chickens."

"If I'd said possums I'd been all right," retorted Baker.

Harrington is a Southern gentleman, and this remark angered him. "Raker—We desire, your Honor, to make an application to present matters—"

The court—You will not. Raker—We desire to prove that the witness was under guard by men paid by the Attorney General's office. We will prove that by Deputy Sheriff Ratchford—

The court—You will not. Take your seat till this matter is settled. I will not have it. Shut up. Gentlemen of the jury, take a recess until Monday. I am sick of the shameful things enacted here day after day.

All this was said in an impassioned voice accompanied by wild gestures, and the Judge's eyes flashed. After the retirement of the jury Raker arose and in a quiet voice asked to present a matter of importance to the court.

"I will not listen to it," said the court, but quiet being restored, Raker said:

This morning I presented to your Honor habeas corpus papers in the cases of eight men. The men are confined in jail and we desire that a writ be made obtainable this afternoon."

No, sir; 10 o'clock Monday morning," said Judge Harrington.

Raker suggested quietly that if the hearing commenced at 9:30 o'clock the Brown case could proceed at 10 o'clock.

The court—I will not get up to hear the matter. I said 10 o'clock. Proceedings were instituted in the cases of Fred Roberts, Harry Roberts, E. S. Trowbridge, Orin A. Trowbridge, James R. Myers Sr., R. L. Nicholas, Claud Marcus and Joseph Leventon. These men were not indicted by the grand jury for complicity in the Lookout lynching, and they were arrested on the complaint of Mary Lorenz, a half-breed daughter of Calvin Hall, one of the victims of the mob. The law provides that the men be given a preliminary hearing within two days after arrest or be discharged or that the preliminary hearing be postponed from day to day. They have not been accorded a preliminary hearing and are still in jail, and counsel for the defense has instituted habeas corpus proceedings for their release.

Last Tuesday Mexico suffered from an earthquake shock, which was most severe at Chilpancingo, where many lives were lost and much property destroyed. First reports approximated the dead at 300. Many were killed in a church, where a crowd of worshippers had gathered. The walls and roof of the building fell.

Hon. J. N. Williamson of Prineville has announced his candidacy for the republican congressional nomination in the 2nd district to succeed Congressman Moody. This announcement puts a quietus on the talk that he might aspire to the state secretaryship. Mr. Williamson was elected to the state senate from this district two years ago and has long been prominent and influential in state politics.

Representative Tongue had a conference with Secretary Hitchcock today, in which he vigorously protested against the creation of a forest reserve in Southwestern Oregon, as proposed by the department. This reserve, if created, would embrace a large section of Curry and Josephine counties, and smaller portions of Coos and Douglas. Mr. Tongue says no reserve is needed for the protection of the water supply and to preserve the rich timber lands of that section would work a great injury to the lumbering interests. Mr. Tongue is opposed to the general policy of extending reserves until the lieu land law has been repealed or radically modified.—Oregonian.

Klamath county will witness an unusual influx of new settlers the next few months, notwithstanding the misrepresentations of truth butchers along the railroad, and many will see the wisdom of casting their lots here and contributing to the general development, notwithstanding the damaging influence of some shortsighted opponents to growth and improvement in the county. Here the new comer will find a comfortable climate, elements which insure good health and as favored a spot as there is on the Coast for accumulating wealth. We need more people, energy, enterprise and capital,—the more, the better,—to hasten growth.

WILL BENEFIT KLAMATH.

The following paragraph published in Saturday's Oregonian shows the bright prospect for immigration and the unprecedented advantage which will accrue to Klamath county, with other Oregon points, by reason of the common rate concession:

"The determination of the Harri-man lines to apply the new settlers' rates through Portland to points on the Southern Pacific as far south as Ashland will inevitably bring much travel to Oregon this year," said a prominent railroad man yesterday. "The northern lines must quote

People who come West to look for locations buy tickets to the farthest point possible for a common rate. They are not obliged to ride clear through, if they shall find a place that suits them, but they have the privilege of going to the farthest point, and purchasers of settlers' tickets want to get all they can for their money. Instead of stopping at Tacoma or Seattle, or even Portland, they will buy a ticket to the farthest point, which will be Ashland. And most of the people who buy tickets to Ashland will come into Western Oregon and look for homes. For the first time Western Oregon will have the benefit of common-point passenger rates, and it is likely to profit from this movement more than any other part of the Northwest.

"Much depends, however, on the welcome the visitors receive. If they find everybody bent on making money out of them by what is vulgarly known as 'pulling their leg,' Western Oregon will not only not profit immediately from the influx of homeseekers, but will be cursed for years by the victims of the ungenerous treatment. The visitors must be treated with reasonable consideration, and something should be done to make their visit pleasant. They should be squarely dealt with and on a fair business basis. Public commercial bodies in Western Oregon could do much worse than make some preparations for receiving the visitors and getting them interested in the country."

BONANZA TALK.

Dear Mr. Editor: Since Pa and Ma Jones had a "spat," they both now refuse to whisper any of the secrets of our town; so I, Bill Jones' boy will give you a short talk in regard to the comings and goings, sayings and doings of our citizens.

Fred Harpold made a business trip to Merrill last Monday, returning Tuesday.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Roy Ingersoll Kilgore, a seven pound girl.

We are glad to see our old time friend, S. D. Whitmore, able to be out breathing the pure air again, after his illness from rheumatism.

Our town was flooded with Indians last Tuesday. The quarantine is raised and they feel like birds released from their cage.

"Uncle" John Nichols is seriously ill from La Grippe. Dr. Johnson is attending him, but chances are against him on account of his age and a complication of other ailments.

Quite a number of our people are on the complaining list on account of bad colds.

J. O. Hamaker made a business trip to Lakeview last week.

We are sorry to learn of the death of Mrs. Dr. Demorest of Lakeview, who died suddenly last Saturday morning.

A goodly number of our citizens are attending court at the Falls this week.

The revival meetings at this place, under the leadership of Rev. Ketcheson, assisted by Rev. Harbit of Klamath Falls, have drawn to a close. Rev. Harbit made many and lasting friends during his brief stay with us. He returns to his home followed by the prayers of the Christian people of our community, that God will bless him in his ministerial
