President Roosevelt gave the oration on Memorial day at Washington City, and it was a brilliant effort, a number of papers comparing it with Lincoln's famous Gettysburg speech.

The bitter war between the British and Boers, which had lasted nearly three years, came to an end by the signing of terms of peace last week. England gives credit to Lord Kitchener for ending the terrible struggle.

Sylvester Penoyer, governor of Oregon from 1887 to 1895 and mayor of Portland from 1896 to 1899, died suddenly of heart failure at his home in Portland at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon. He was a man of national reputation, and had many good qualities which made him prominent and popular. He was aged 61 years.

With a republican majority in the county of more than 100, shown in the vote for state officers, the democrats were allowed to elect all of the county officers but two—treasurer and coroner. Thus it would seem that the result is very agreeable to a large number of republicans in the county. The reason they co-operated with the democrats to secure the defeat of the republican nominees might be conjectured on various grounds, but conjectures are useless at this time. Few will deny that the vanquished candidates are good, capable men, and to many their defeat in the face of a majority seems unwarranted. The fact, as it is fair to admit, that the democratic candidates were good men and would make satisfactory officers, did not justify republican voters in supporting them in opposition to their own men, who were equally as worthy and competent. But all should gracefully abide by the will of the majority and let any differences that may have been engendered pass with the campaign and be forgotten.

KLAMATH REPUBLICAN SUPPLEMENT.

VOL. 7.

KLAMATH FALLS, OREGON, THURSDAY, JUNE 5, 1902.

OREGON TIMBER.

(Portland Oregonian.)

Oregon's timber resources have lately attracted the attention of practical millmen who have found in the depleted forest supply of Michigan and Wisconsin the necessity of expansion if they would continue in the lumber business. As a result, agents of some of the largest saw-mill companies of the Middle Northwest have within a few years past looked over timber lands in various sections of the state, and have made from time to time some very large purchases. Having first cruised the lands carefully, they have bought understandingly. It may be surmised from a certain undercurrent of criticism that owners have not always sold as understandingly. These lands have been sequestered by isolation so long that their owners, in many instances, have held them at a nominal value, and with the first appearance of a purchaser have closed gladly with such terms as have been offered, in order to "get something" as they express it, out of their long unprofitable holdings. This is not surprising, since such lands are practically valueless to a man whose entire capital they represent, and for which no purchaser appears. When, however, an intending purchaser, with capital sufficient to build sawmills, establish logging camps and construct railroads, appears, these lands assume a positive value according to their location, extent and the quality and the quantity of their forest growth. While owners should avoid the too common error of placing a prohibitive value upon their holdings, they should as a matter of intelligent self-interest, inform themselves as thoroughly as do intending purchasers of the commercial value of the lands, to the end they may receive what they are reasonably worth in parting with them. It does no sort of good to make complaint about a business transaction after it is once consummated. We shall probably hear a great deal about the sharp bargains that great lumber syndicates have driven in securing vast timber areas in this state a few years hence. There would be no basis for such complaints were the holders of timber lands to proceed as carefully and intelligently in the matter of their disposal as the purchasers proceed in the matter of their requirement. The development of our timber resources is desirable. To develop them capital is necessary, and the many small individual holdings must be merged into syndicate holdings. This is a fair, open and legitimate proposition. The only drawback to its satisfactory consummation is in the lack of specific knowledge, on the part of the present owners, of the commercial value of their timber. Without this they are likely to block development by placing a valuation altogether too high upon their lands; or, on the other hand, to part with them at prices which will be made the basis of ill will against a future industry that may result in vastations and unprofitable contentions.

FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

The following letter has been received by Hon. O. A. Stearns and explains itself:

CORVALLIS, ORE., May 27, 1902.
Hon. O. A. Stearns,
Klamath Falls, Oregon.

Dear Sir: We contemplate holding a series of Farmers' Institutes in southeastern Oregon during the coming month and Klamath Falls is one of the points where we hope to hold such an Institute. Will you kindly advise us whether you think the farmers will be sufficiently interested in a meeting of this character to attend at this season of the year? The subjects selected for discussion are forage plants, animal husbandry and horticulture. The evening meeting will be mainly devoted to stereoscopic illustrated lectures on types and breeds of livestock and the work of the Agricultural college. We hope to make these meetings both entertaining and instructive. We expect to be at Klamath Falls on July 5th. We could be there on the 4th but presume that would not be a good date for such an institute owing to celebrations being held. Thanking you in advance for a reply, I am, Very truly yours,
JAMES WITHEYCOMBE.

BIG STRIKE BY ASHLAND BOY.

(Town Talk.)

Frank Garrett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Garrett of Ashland, has made a rich strike at Boliver, N. Y. In company with William Royce, S. S. Owens and W. H. Ferrington, he organized an oil company, each member holding a one-fourth interest. They subscribed $150 each and begun their search. Fifty acres of land belonging to the Ithamer Ferrington farm were leased and the drill was put into operation. At a depth of 900 feet the young man struck a gusher and on the day of the strike $48,000 was offered for his holdings, but the boys refused to sell the property and will make many more thousands of dollars from it. The land leased was a piece belonging to the father of one of the organizers of the company. Several years ago young Garrett left Ashland to work for an uncle in a mercantile establishment at Boliver.

A TOUGH TRAMP.

(Ashland Tidings.)

A negro hobo went through an experience on the railroad trestle in this city, Tuesday afternoon, which he will remember as long as he inhabits this mundane sphere. In his desire to continue his travels down the valley he attempted to board the east bound freight on Oak street, near the landing of the trestle. He caught the iron side below the car door with his fingers and attempted to swing his feet to the rod underneath. Failing to land his feet he still held on with his fingers, and in this position was dragged across the high trestle, his legs hitting each individual cross timber of the structure through its entire length. Reaching the opposite bank he dropped to the ground, striking his head on a rock as he did so, which rendered him unconscious for some minutes. His trousers were hanging in ribbons from his body, and his legs between the knees and the hips were masses of bruises. Splinters of all sizes were found sticking into his flesh. Under the care of Chief of Police Smith he was picked up and carried to the city jail, where his injuries were dressed. In an hour or two he seemed to have almost completely recovered from the shock and wounds and started away on foot as though the affair had been an every day experience. He gave his name as Henry Gaddie, and said he was a native of Louisville, Ky., and had been in the employ of C. A. Haggins, the millionaire turfman.
