Up to him accounts the sheriffs and posse, seeking the two escaping desperadoes, Tracy and Merrill, hadn't imperiled their lives a great deal by any exhibitions of heroic bravery.

On Saturday Representative Moody called on President Roosevelt and expressed gratitude for the efforts he put forth in favor of the irrigation bill. The measure could not have passed the house without his influence and hence his supporters feel largely indebted to him.

Portland Oregonian: Homesekers' rates on the Great Northern Railway will be resumed July 1, continuing on stated days until November. This will give men of this class a chance to see the Pacific Northwest in its harvest season, including that of grain, hay, fruit and hops; the exhibit can scarcely fail to impress practical agriculturists and horticulturists favorably.

In an article giving the record of volcanoes, the San Francisco Bulletin mentions Mount Shasta as follows: "Mount Shasta, the great volcano of Northern California, is known to have been alive three hundred years ago. During one of its eruptions it sent forth a great lava stream in two branches. One of these was twelve miles in length. The other entered the canyon of the Sacramento river and reached a distance of fifty miles before cooling. The flow of lava displaced the river, but the latter has partially refilled its ancient channel."

The government will send four parties into Oregon this summer to experiment and gain information in the interest of future irrigation. One party will work in Malheur and Harney counties, another in Baker county, another in the Blue mountains and another in Josephine and Jackson counties. It might be a good scheme for the government to send still another to Klamath county. While no reservoirs would need to be built here, investigation would prove the feasibility of tapping the natural reservoirs we already have, and show the propriety of dishing out a little federal aid in the work of such tapping. The success of a local company, which proposes to appropriate enough water from upper Klamath lake to irrigate 40,000 acres of land, would doubtless be greatly facilitated and hastened by a contribution from the government.

NEW GOVERNMENT SURVEYS.

(Ashland Tidings.)
There will be another call for bids for the U. S. Surveyor-General's office within the next week or 10 days for the survey of townships in Lane county in the Cascade forest ranges. The public survey executed by William C. Elliott and George S. Nickerson, in Lake county, last season, have all been accepted by the General Land Office and triplicate plats have been filed in the local land office at Lakeview by Surveyor-General Melvin.
