THURSDAY, JANUARY 29, 1903.

It is expected that the legislature will take some action looking to the improvement of the roads of Oregon. This state is a leader in many ways, but not in good roads.

Hon. Binger Hermann, who retires as commissioner of the general land office, is receiving liberal and favorable mention as a likely successor to the late Congressman Tongue. Considering Mr. Hermann's efficient public services in the past, it would be difficult to find a better man for the place.

Both branches of the Oregon legislature have passed the bill to appropriate $500,000 for the Lewis and Clark exposition. This spirit of liberality and enterprise will doubtless inspire generous donations on the part of other states for the same purpose and means much for the success copies of the senate and house calendars, from which it appears that the legislature has been by no means idle in attending to the business before it. Up to January 18th, 196 bills were introduced in the house and 118 in the senate. In addition, there were a large number of resolutions, memorials, etc. Up to January 18th only four bills had been passed by both houses and approved by the governor, the most important one being the appropriation of $500,000 for the Lewis and Clark celebration.

The desirability of changing the manner of electing U. S. senators is again impressed by the appearance of deadlocks in several legislatures and the absorption of time which those bodies should devote to the consideration of measures in the interest of their respective states. The most deplorable condition presented at this time over a U. S. senatorship is in the Colorado legislature, where chaos seems to reign and there are symptoms of war and bloodshed. Such unfortunate spectacles, which appear to some degree in one or more states with every recurrence of the time for the election of U. S. senators, forces the conviction that they should be chosen by direct vote.
