GROWING HAIRY VETCH FOR SEED.

The following information relating to the growing of the hairy vetch for seed is furnished by the bureau of plant industry of the United States department of agriculture, through its seed laboratory, in response to numerous inquiries on the subject:

The cultivation of hairy vetch has increased rapidly in the last few years and would be much more common if the seed was raised in this country and especially on the farms where it is to be sown.

Practically all the seed now used in the United States is imported from Europe. During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1903, over 80,000 pounds of this seed was brought in.

Experiments have been carried on by the seed laboratory of the bureau for two years in St. Marys county, Md., and the past year in Wayne county, Ohio, to determine the practicability of growing the seed in this country. From results of these trials it is evident that the seed can be produced at a profit over a wide area in the United States.

Great difficulty has been experienced in harvesting the seed when grown alone. It ripens very unevenly and if left until most of the seed is mature it becomes matted on the ground and shell and moulds badly. It was found that by sowing with rye a sufficient support was furnished to keep it off the ground and allow it to be cut easily with a mowing machine. Rye seems best adapted as a supporting crop on account of the time of ripening and the stiff straw.

The best results were obtained with seeding from one-half to three-fourths bushels of vetch and one-half bushel of rye to the acre, sowing from the middle to the last of September.

The crop should be cut about the time the last pods are formed and the vines are getting dry. The cutting is done with an ordinary mowing machine, after which the vines and straw should be put in piles and allowed to dry. The threshing is done with an ordinary threshing machine.

The 4 acres in Ohio yielded 13 bushels of vetch and 61 bushels of rye. In Maryland the storms knocked the rye down so it did not fill well, but the 4 acres yielded 18 bushels of vetch and 8 bushels of rye. Reports from Mississippi show a yield of from 5 to 7 bushels per acre in that state.

In many instances hairy vetch has been sown and proved a failure under ordinary cultivation. As it is adapted to a considerable variety of soils and a wide area, it is certain that the failure in most instances is due to the absence of the organism which produces the root tubercles and has the property of fixing the free nitrogen in the air making it available for plant food. In sowing the areas referred to above the greater part was inoculated with the nitrifying organism, but a strip was left in each case on which none of the inoculating material was used. A vigorous growth of hairy vetch was obtained on the inoculated plots, while on the uninoculated plots in both cases the growth was very scanty and the ground almost bare. This shows the ability of the vetch to make a very satisfactory growth by means of the inoculation on the ground where it proves an entire failure under ordinary cultivation.

Unless hairy vetch has already been grown successfully on a piece of ground, it should be inoculated to insure success. Inoculating material will be furnished by, and all inquiries concerning it should be addressed to, Bureau of Plant and Industry, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

The department has no seed of hairy vetch for distribution.

BITS BY THE BALES

"Tommy," said the next-door neighbor, "did you know your mother has been looking for you?"

"You bet," answered Tommy. "That's why she can't find me."

"Johnny," said a mother to her five-year-old son, "you have been unusually naughty to-day."

"I know it," replied the little fellow. "I was naughty on purpose so I could promise to be better to-morrow."

The teacher had been telling the class about the rhinoceros family. "Now name some things," said she, "that are very dangerous to get near to, and that have horns." "Automobiles," replied little Jimmie Jones, promptly.

Mamma (at dinner)—You mustn't stare at Mr. Smith so, Ethel.

Little Ethel—'m waiting to see him take a drink, mamma.

"Why, dear?"

"Cause papa says he drinks like a fish, and I never saw a fish drink."

"Mamma," said five-year-old Margie, "I'll make a bet with you."

"What kind of a bargain, dear?" asked her mother.

"If you'll give me a penny every day to buy candy with," replied the small diplomat, "I'll not tell anyone you have store teeth."

Little Harry lived in the country and had never seen a sailor.

"Papa," he said one day, "sailors must be awful small men."

"Why do you think so?" asked his father.

"Because," answered Harry, "I read in the paper about one who went to sleep on his watch."
