IMPORTANT TO MUSIC LOVERS
Educational Values Defined—Leading Universities and Schools Wherein the Piano or the Aeolian Are Now Employed—A Forward Move of Great Interest.
In connection with the recitals which have just been inaugurated for the season of 1904-1905 by the Aeolian Co., at Aeolian Hall, it is announced that while these recitals are intended primarily to demonstrate the artistic possibilities of the piano, they are also profoundly suggestive of the educational value of the instrument. The invention of the piano has made it possible for every one to obtain in the home an intelligent familiarity with the world's masterpieces of music—without which no education can be considered well rounded or complete.
During the past year, the educational world has been deeply stirred by a realization of the importance of music, as distinguished from the old-fashioned idea that a musical education consisted in trying to learn to perform upon the piano—and not succeeding.
Progressive colleges and schools which aim to have the latest and best appliances for the use of pupils have added or are now about to add a piano to the department of music. The following is but a partial list of such institutions in which either a piano or an Aeolian is at present being used: Harvard University, Columbia University, Amherst College, Yassar College, Radcliffe College, Tufts College, Teachers' College, University of Michigan, Oberlin College, Beloit College, Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences, Framingham (Mass.) Normal School, Columbia Conservatory of Music (Chicago), Crane Normal Institute of Music (Portland, N. Y.), High School (Pittsford, Pa.), Briardiff Manor School, Morton Street Public School (Newark, N. J.), Miss May Winsor's School (Boston), St. Mary's Academy (Burlington, Vt.)
It is interesting to learn that so many of our foremost educational institutions have introduced a piano player into the department of music. But, as the Aeolian Co. announces, "it is significant that in every instance the choice has been the Aeolian."
Under the auspices of the recently inaugurated "Music Lovers' Library," clubs are being formed in all parts of the country to carry on the study of music in private homes. Most instructive and fascinating courses in musical appreciation are now available to all piano owners. A very interesting descriptive handbook of "The New Musical Education" will be sent to any address upon application to the Aeolian Co., 302 Fifth Avenue, New York.—The Music Trade Review, Oct. 29, 1904.
The above article shows what value the Aeolian is to any home. The Coos Piano House, of Medford, with headquarters here at the City Drug Store, is the sole agent for all of the Aeolian goods. Come and see us and avail yourself of the opportunity of getting a good piano from a reliable house, while the proprietor is here personally. All goods sold on easy terms to suit purchasers. Organs and old pianos taken in exchange for new ones. Messrs. Marion Hanks and W. W. Scott are on the list having bought pianos of us the past few days.—Coos Piano House.
