The price paid for this property was $4000.

Mr. Bristol stated that he would erect a modern brick or stone building on this property in the spring. This undoubtedly will soon be one of the best business blocks in the city, as Mr. Melhase has just finished his two story stone, and H. F. Murdoch will erect a two story brick in the spring, part of which will probably be occupied by the postoffice.

TOO MUCH ADVICE

There is much quibbling among officials over the exact status of irrigation projects in Oregon and Washington, but the situation is as represented; there is money enough in both states for immediate work, but Mr. Hitchcock refuses to authorize its expenditure.

This situation brings to light the fact that the management of the reclamation fund has become badly involved in the last few months. According to official figures, Mr. Hitchcock has allotted $31,000,000, when in fact there are only $28,000,000 in the fund. Since that embarrassment became apparent, the figures have been changed, and Mr. Hitchcock today declared that instead of a deficit he actually had a surplus of $9,000,000. The only way this surplus can be reckoned is by wiping out allotments for all projects not under actual construction, including Malheur and Palouse. But, if this admission is made, then the department cannot reasonably refuse to build in Oregon and Washington, on the ground that it has "no money."

The plain truth, which cannot longer be concealed, is simply this: Mr. Hitchcock, in directing irrigation affairs, has taken counsel of too many subordinate officials, men whose views and policies do not coincide. These advisers are working at cross purposes; they make counter-recommendations; what one favors others attack, and by following the suggestion first of one and then another the secretary has unintentionally so tangled the reclamation fund that no living man can say how much money is available for building irrigation works, how much has been apportioned or how much has been spent. One adviser says there is a deficit; another tells him there is a surplus of $9,000,000; another says there is a surplus of less than $100,000, and all have figures and records to support them.—Oregonian.
