Taken to U. S. Supreme Court

Word comes from Washington that W. B. Mathews, special attorney for the state of Oregon, has taken the Klamath Swamp Land case to the United States Supreme Court. This means that there will be another long delay before there will be the least prospect for the opening up of the Klamath Reservation. Many years ago the Government began the allotment of the lands on the Klamath Reservation to the Indians, with the object of opening to settlement the thousands of acres that would remain. With this land occupied it would practically double the taxable property of the county, and inure not only to the benefit of the county but to the entire state.

The State of Oregon, however, entered a contest and blocked the work of the Government. It was claimed that the 90,000 odd acres of swamp land within the borders of the Reservation, and much of which is occupied by the Indians, belonged to the state according to the act of March 12, 1880, granting to the state all the swamp or overflowed lands within its borders. This contest was decided adversely to the state, both in the Land Office and the Interior Department.

It is impossible to tell what the decision of the U. S. Supreme Court will be, but even if the state should win it would be the worst thing that could happen for Klamath county. The result would probably be that it would be gobbled up by some land shark at about $1 an acre. The amount gained by the state would be insignificant compared to the enormous increase in the valuation that would result from the settlement of this vast tract of rich land.

"Other Peoples Money" Tonight

Tonight will be produced the comedy of "Other Peoples Money" and that it will be a thorough success is a certainty. Never in the history of Klamath Falls has a play been staged with such infinite detail, or exactness. The difference between the repertoire and the single bill or combination actor was never more strongly marked than is being shown in the acting and directing of this piece. It is this minute and artistic detail that shows the difference between a star actor and the ordinary cheap performer. The people have all been wisely chosen and are not only hard workers but fit their respective characters to a remarkable degree, and their complete respect and confidence in their stage director is enabling them tonight to show the most remarkable performance ever in this part of the state.

There is that about the play of "Other Peoples Money" which appeals to the intelligent masses. The great ruling passion of the American people, money getting, was never more aptly or comically displayed, both in plot and construction as well as in the characters than it is in this comedy. It is better to laugh than to cry at any time, and the man who is dyspeptic, sad or melancholy, after witnessing and enjoying hearty laughter over a play like "Other Peoples Money" will go forth rejuvenated for a battle with the world and the old struggle of money getting.

Bonanza News

(From our regular correspondent)

Bonanza is still in the right place as was evident last night at our dance or "Ball En Masque." There were about fifty couple who donned the false faces and there was also some fine costumes. Mr. John Houston, of your city, was present by proxy with a number of suits for both men and women, and succeeded in renting all his store. He could have rented more if he had been supplied with the goods.

The best and most original character was Ross Sutton, of Yonka valley, who was arrayed in a suit bedecked with the natural growth of sage brush, and representing "Dairy Dottings" also taking when he could subscriptions for the Republican. The character was so well sustained that C. W. Sherman Jr. was to the extent of one dollar loser on the guess of who he was, as he, C. W., said it was "Chap" or his uncle, and he could not tell which.

Mrs. G. K. VanRiper and family were present at our gathering and the boys were glad to get back among the Bonanza schoolmates once more.

Among those present at the ball from Bly were: Mr. and Mrs. Alex Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Finley, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Garrett, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Boyd, Mrs. S. C. Hamaker and son Mark, James Boyd Jr., Clarence Taylor, mother and sister, and Thomas Sparks. Klamath Falls was represented by County Clerk George Chastain, B. St. Geo. Bishop, Miss Lola Nelson and Lester Kirkpatrick.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Grohs and the Duncan and Kilgore boys, of Langell valley were also in attendance. Mr. Grohs purchased two lots in our town yesterday and is going to build a fine residence for a winter home as soon as the spring opens.

We are informed that Leo Boan claims to have purchased the East End Barber Shop for a consideration of $1000, he retaining Neil Campbell as his chief barber.

Our Christmas tree on Saturday evening was the finest in the history of our town.

Our church is coming to the front rapidly, four new members were on Sunday united with the Methodist church here. They were Mrs. Nettie Forbes, Mrs. Cora Brown, Miss Myrtle Hamaker and Master Mont Hamaker. This speaks well for our minister and our people and we hope to see at least fifteen more converts before spring.

A large crowd expect to go from here to Bly on next Monday night to be entertained by Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Hamaker in a 1906 ball at that place.

C. U. Agin.
Bonanza, Or., December 28.

Installation of Officers.

All members of the A. O. U. W. Lodge are requested to be present at the regular meeting of the lodge next Tuesday evening as the installation of officers for the coming term will take place at that time. There will also be work in the second degree and other important business.

W. W. Baldwin, M. W.
J. W. Siemens, Recorder.

Most Deadly Disease.

Pneumonia is now the most deadly disease of the cities of the United States. The two largest centers of population, Chicago and New York, are striking examples of the truth of this statement. In these cities in the last few years pneumonia has increased by leaps and bounds, until it has displaced consumption as the "captain of the men of death." Consumption, by reason of rational treatment in the way of hygienic improvements, good sanitation, better houses, fresh air, and diet, has steadily decreased throughout America and especially in the cities, but statistics show that pneumonia year after year claims far more victims. The figures for New York and Chicago during the last decade supply convincing evidence that the outcry as to the prevalence of pneumonia is no alarmist tale, but is founded upon sober facts. In the first six months of 1904 there were 42,700 deaths from all causes in New York city, and of this number 8,360, or nearly 20 per cent, were due to pneumonia. In 1903 9,714 persons died in New York from pneumonia. The total death rate has risen from 18.8 per 1,000 in 1903 to 22.23 per 1,000 for the first six months of 1904, acute lung affections being mainly responsible for this increase. In 1900 105,971 persons died in the United States of pneumonia, 10.16 per cent. of all deaths being due to the disease. In the same period the mortality from consumption decreased from 12.25 per cent. to 10.99 per cent. Comparing city with country, the census of 1900 shows that the mortality from pneumonia per 100,000 inhabitants of cities was 233.1; for rural districts, 125.9. From consumption, for cities, 204.8; for rural districts, 124.1. The mortality from pneumonia among negroes was 349 per 100,000 and among whites 184.8 per 100,000. Whites of foreign birth are shown to be much more susceptible than those of native birth. In Chicago in 1903 there were 4,629 deaths from pneumonia, exceeding the deaths from consumption by more than 1,500. The present Chicago proportion of pneumonia deaths to deaths from all causes is 13.6 per cent.; from consumption, 11.3 per cent. Corresponding figures for New York are 17 per cent. for pneumonia and 11.5 for consumption.

Valuable Convictions.

Nobody who is endowed with a good mind and wants to live to his satisfaction can afford to neglect the acquirement of convictions, says Edward S. Martin, in the Metropolitan. What are they? They ought to be opinions based on knowledge and definitely thought out. Practically they come in various ways—often by inheritance, or as the result of early training; sometimes by association, sometimes from the automatic working of the mind during long periods when it is acquiring knowledge and experience. Sometimes, again, convictions seem to come suddenly, especially religious convictions, though there is usually a long process of preparatory thought behind them, and it is really only the final conclusion that is sudden. Deep convictions on any subject don't come ready-made. One has to work for them; to earn them. If they are to hold and to influence conduct, they must be planted deep.

The demand of the people for "cheap" products is the greatest cause of adulteration, says the San Francisco Chronicle.

Retailers demand something by which they can undersell their competitors, and when they buy adulterated goods, they know it perfectly well. The demand of the retailers makes a demand of the jobbers, which all manufacturers hasten to grant. Doubtless there are many manufacturers who are willing to cheat, but it is doubtful whether their profits are greater on adulterated goods than on those which are pure. At any rate, as manufacturers, no more than wholesale or retail dealers, can afford to be undersold, all believe themselves compelled to cheat, and, as a rule, do cheat.

"One of the chief embarrassments by which this country is now confronted, vouchsafes an optimistic contemporary, is excessive riches. The banks and other depositories are overflowing with funds, and there is more money than the people know how to use advantageously. It may be somewhat unequally distributed, to be sure, but a greater or lesser share of it is within the reach of those who work for it." This may be mainly true and yet there are a great many workers who never get a day off because of funds.

An Ohio man wrote to Elmer Dover, secretary of the republican national committee, claiming to have done great work for Roosevelt in the campaign, and asking for a job. He said he would like to be "chief euspidorian" of the treasury department. Mr. Dover wrote in reply: "I regret to inform you that there is no such position as chief euspidorian of the treasury department, although I think there might very well be. Unfortunately, however, while you have

GAMBREL-ROOF BARN.

Boomy, Convenient Building Which the Handy Farmer Can Build for Himself.

In this design we show a barn plan from which more barns have been erected than from any other barn plan ever designed, says the Farmers' Review. In its construction we have a frame made up of small timbers, but one of such strength that it has withstood the high winds of the Dakota prairies, when buildings of heavier frames have been wrecked. Each and every timber that composes the frame has been proportioned to withstand the strain it is compelled to resist; and in doing this the use of long and heavy timbers has been avoided, thus bringing the cost within the limits of economy. The sole duty of the frame is to act as a support for the roof and a carrier for the hay fork.

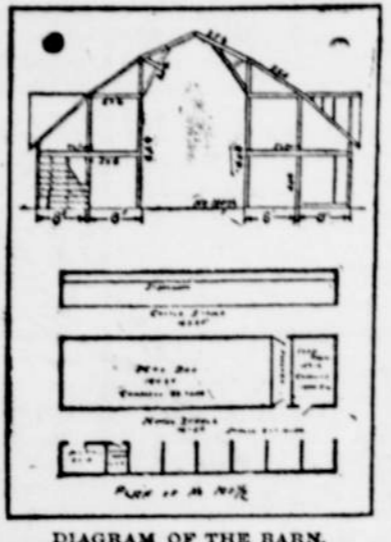

DIAGRAM OF THE BARN.

This plan is 48x64 feet, with stables and hay bay each 16 feet wide. The cattle stable is fitted with machines, and has a concrete floor extending back to the drop. Wide sliding doors at each end readily admit of the removal of waste.

The horse stable has six eight-foot stalls, box stall and harness room 6x8 feet. By standing the horses with head to the outer wall they receive plenty of light and air and the stall partitions act as additional braces to the frame. A passage four feet wide connects the stables, and a feed room 10x16 has a capacity of 1,000 bushels of grain. The hay bay will hold about 60 tons of hay, with ample space over the stables for the storage of straw and bedding.

Many farmers, who have not been able, from lack of funds, to erect this barn complete at one time, have built either one or both of the stables with a straw roof, and, later, when they could afford to do so, have added the roof and ends to the hay bay. By this method all the building they have done has been permanent, and they have avoided the waste of material that would have resulted had they erected temporary sheds and then torn them down and used the lumber in a larger barn when they were ready for the same.

FARMER AND GOOD ROADS.

What is Being Done in New Jersey in the Interests of Better Highways.

New Jersey is the most progressive state in the union in the construction and care of its wagon roads, and therefore the estimate of her road commissioner of the saving effected in that state by good roads may be regarded as accurate, because he has unusual opportunities for observing the difference in the utility of an improved and neglected road. His estimate is in substance as follows: It cost nine and one-half cents per bushel to ship wheat from Chicago to New York, a distance of 900 miles; it cost three cents a bushel to haul wheat on a level road a distance of five miles, and on sandy road it would cost nine cents per mile to haul it. The saving on a bushel of wheat with good roads for a distance of five miles would be equivalent to that of 600 miles of transportation by steamer or canal boat, or 375 miles by railroad. One mile of good roads would make a saving equal to 75 miles by rail nearer to the markets. It is estimated that the cost of hauling 500,000,000 tons of farm produce to market is $2 per ton, or just about $1,000,000,000; it is estimated that about 40 per cent. of this last amount, or $400,000,000, would be saved each year if farmers were able to do this hauling over good roads.

Soiling System.

There are some farms in America where the soiling system is the best to follow, and those farms are on high-priced lands. There are more farms where it still pays better to pasture than to cut, feed and carry to the cows in summer time, because the land is still low in price in most sections of the country. As the land increases in value the practice of soiling must increase.
