Irrigation vs. "Going to Canada"

The farmers who are parting with their acres in Ohio, Indiana, and elsewhere in the Middle West, and because with the proceeds they can buy more land in Manitoba or the Saskatchewan region, are not wise. True, they sell the old homesteads for $10 to $20 an acre, and buy Canadian land for $10 to $15, or even less; and then they figure that they have a big cash surplus left to put in the bank, or lend on mortgages. But they quickly find out that it costs vastly more to erect homes in the Canadian Northwest, as comfortable as those they left, than Canadian tariffs make their farming tools and machinery cost about 25 per cent more than in the United States, and that wearing apparel and groceries are proportionately higher. They are farther from a market also; therefore, they get considerably less for their produce. Then, too, the growing season is much shorter, and the certainty of being able to harvest a crop much less than in the regions they have left. As for the difference in climate, a single Canadian winter is often enough to sicken the emigrant and all his family of their "bargains."

Doubling production is vastly better than doubling the area of one's farm. If the Ohio, Indiana and Iowa farmer, who possesses from 80 to 200 acres, or more, of land, wants to improve his condition, let him set up an irrigation plant—getting his neighbors to join him if he can—and then sell off half or more of his land in small tracts of 10 to 40 acres, and proceed to cultivate the remainder intensively; planning to get at least two crops off of every acre, except perhaps, such as may be given to orchards. His income from the smaller area will almost certainly be larger than he received from his whole big farm before; and he will have quite as much money for loans and investments, as if he had yielded to the "Canadian fever."—Maxwell's Talisman.

Klamath Allotment Decision

In an opinion by Justice Brewer the Supreme Court of the United States has dismissed for lack of jurisdiction the case of the state of Oregon vs Secretary Hitchcock and Commissioner Richards, involving the right of the Government to allow in severalty to the Klamath Indians the lands comprised in their reservation. It is held that the title to the lands is still in the government, and the court will not interfere in the government administration of the land. It is understood that the District Attorney's office in Portland will take up the matter now and aid Commissioner Richards in carrying out the law by administering the land as public domain. The case has been pending for some time. The decision of Justice Brewer is a victory for the government.

Ashland Normal Notes.

The Y. W. C. A. met Wednesday noon in the Chapel. The subject, "The Power of a Loving Life," was presented by Miss Jessie Darby. After the discussion of the subject, the members of the Association decided to give an entertainment Saturday evening, for the benefit of the Bus fund. The program will consist of readings, and vocal and instrumental selections.

Miss Maude Minear left school Monday for Medford. She, with her mother will go back to their old home in Ohio, sometime this month. Miss Minear is a good student and we are sorry to lose her.

The Enterpean Club, met last Saturday evening in the Normal Chapel. Many good musical numbers were given. The remainder of the evening was spent in social games.

The students of the Academic department organized committees and brought the necessary articles, Friday to clean the campus and the Academy building. The students worked with a will, and by evening, the buildings and campus presented a very neat, clean appearance.

Chapel Notes
Tuesday morning, the Primary department had charge of the Chapel exercises. After a May song and a recitation by the Primary pupils, the members of the Faculty were presented with May baskets. The May baskets were very pretty, especially one received by Pres. Mulkey. This one was made of crepe paper in the Normal colors, orange and purple, and filled with purple pansies and poppies. All of the children in the Primary grades received May baskets from the Primary teachers.

Wednesday morning, Prof. VanScoy read an article on "The Home for American Deep Sea Sailors," which is located at Snug Harbor, Long Island.

The founder of the home was Capt. Robt. Randall. The estate is located in New York City and is very valuable; the income being a million dollars a year. According to the terms of the will, all of the income must be expended each year. This income troubles the trustees of the estate, as the number of deep sea sailors seems to decrease, while the income steadily increases. The home is luxuriously fitted with all modern improvements. There is a Chapel on the grounds, and a theatre was erected a few years ago. Theatrical troupes come from New York City to amuse the old sailors. Every one of the inmates of the home is given every comfort. The trustees, however, are at a loss in expending the money, as the expenses are much less than the income.

Thursday morning, Prof. Mulkey told of the event which happened sixty-three years ago, on May 2. On that day in 1843, a provisional government was organized in the territory now comprising Washington, Idaho, Oregon and the western part of Montana. This was the Oregon country, at that time.

Friday morning, Prof. Hanby, of Central point gave the students an inspiring talk on "The Value of an Education." Prof. Hanby is principal of the Central Point schools. A new school building will be erected at Central Point this year and two more grades added. This makes the course in the High school a four year course.

The Benefit Promoter.
Of all the strange forms of employment in which men are engaged not one is more unusual than that of a second rate actor who has given up his profession to become an organizer of benefits.

His calling is not generally known and only some misfortune would acquaint you with it. Suppose you were a butcher and your shop and its contents had been destroyed by fire, propounds the New York Herald. You would undoubtedly get a letter from the man in question, asking if you would like a benefit organized at a local music hall on behalf of the workpeople. If so he would be pleased to organize it free of cost and with advantage to all concerned. Should you hunt him up at the address given he will be delighted to tell you how he came to adopt this profession and how he goes to work to organize a benefit. Whenever a disaster befalls anyone he is on the spot at once offering sympathy and services. If he gains the consent of the unfortunate to help them out of their trouble he at once forms a committee of sympathizers. These patrons are obtained by means of a circular asking for the patronage of the addressee in the said circumstances. The patronage is generally given, and often a donation toward the fund is sent. A proprietor of one of the music halls, a friend of the organizer, usually gives the use of the hall on an off night, expecting to make something from the increased takings at the bar. Then there are plenty of budding music hall artists who are glad to donate their services so that they may get a hearing before a full house. The profits of the organizer vary. His charges for a "one man affair" are smaller than for getting up a show for a strike fund or the employes of a firm. There is no question in this business of obtaining money under false pretences. The methods are above reproach and the organizer has three weeks' hard work to do in getting up most of the benefits.

Deadly Worry.
Theraputies, telepathy and kindred interests maintains that thousands of people actually think themselves to death every year by allowing their minds to dwell on morbid subjects. It would be more accurate to say, remarks the Philadelphia Ledger, and truly, that these persons worry themselves to death. It is not thinking. To think would be to fortify the mind against morbidity. There seems to be no doubt that unreasoning and unreasonable worry has a distinct and pernicious effect on mind and body. That it is practicable to overcome this cause of trouble is affirmed by special students of psychology, but there is an attraction to some minds in morbid melancholy and a disposition to shun whatever is cheerful and wholesome.
