

KLAMATH REPUBLICAN

E. J. MURRAY, Editor.

LEADING NEWSPAPER OF INTERIOR OREGON.

TWO DOLLARS THE YEAR IN ADVANCE.

Klamath Falls, Ore., Thursday, June 14 1906.

There will not be a democratic member in the lower house of the next legislature.

There was a heart breaking finish in the race for sheriff of Multnomah county. Robert L. Stevens beat Tom Word by five votes, and now Tom plays the baby and is crying "fraud" and "contest."

Another "Boss" was laid on the shelf last election day—George C. Brownell of Clackamas county. He was beaten by J. E. Hedger, who was elected State Senator by 209 plurality. There are in Clackamas county 3000 republicans and 800 democrats registered.

The high handed and outrageous tactics adopted by some of the fire-insurance companies in San Francisco has aroused the people of that city to a high pitch of resentment. The insurance people have sought to take advantage of every possible loop-hole to avoid paying the full value of the policies, and vigorous efforts are being made to compel them to do so. While it will result in keeping the needy ones out of their much needed money, it is to be hoped that it will bring about the enactment of stringent laws by every state in the union so as to prevent a repetition of the highway robbery tactics practiced in Frisco.

Notwithstanding the determined stand taken by the Beef Trust, it looks as if Roosevelt was going to win out in his fight to provide government inspection of the output of the packing establishments owned by this aggregation. The attack made by the President has cost the packers much money, and a goodly portion of the money they have stolen from the cattle men of the west has gone glimmering. The people of the nation are back of the president in his effort to secure pure, wholesome foods, and if he does not win his fight, it will be because there are too many members of congress owned body and soul by these corporations.

The form of Bryan seems to be looming up very large on the horizon of democracy, and the leaders of that party are turning towards him in a frenzied appeal to lead them out of the wilderness. Bryan occupied much the same position in 1904, when, during his absence in Europe the rank and file turned toward the absent one. When he landed in New York he shattered their hopes by re-iterating his steadfast belief in his past theories and propounding new ones equally as radical. His star came down with lightning rapidity. He is absent from America now, and it is dollars to doughnuts that when he returns this time he will explode a bomb so charged with radicalism, that it will kill off the followers who are asking his help.

BRYAN AGAINST HEARST

Fond Hopes of the Democratic Leaders of the East.

New York.—William Jennings Bryan on the stump, pleading for votes against William Randolph Hearst, because the editor is too radical, and furthermore is no longer a Democrat!

That is the spectacle which is promised in New York State this fall, and the leaders of the Democratic organization regard it as their trump card. They are only speaking of it in whispers as yet.

Bryan, who is now traveling around the world, is due to arrive here early in August, and plans are under way to give him a grand reception, and one that will convince him that he alone is the idol of the Democratic party.

Preparations are now under way to hold a great meeting in Madison Square Garden to be attended by democrats from all parts of the country. Among those who have already signified their intention of being present are: United States Senator William J. Stone, of Missouri; Clark Howell, of Georgia; Moses Wetmore of St. Louis; Carter Harrison, of Chicago; Joseph J. Willett, of Alabama; ex-United States Senator Towne, of Minnesota (now Congressman Towne of New York); O. H. P. Belmont, and democrats of every shade of opinion in New York State.

This meeting will be one grand hurrah for Bryan as the Presidential nominee in 1908. The men who voted against him in two Presidential elections will be prominent among those who will do him homage, and he will be shown that nothing but his own positive declination can prevent him from securing the nomination almost unanimously.

And then he will be asked to get to work right away, and aid in killing off Hearst.

It is planned to use him as the headline speaker during the campaign. He will be sent all over the state to expound to voters on the danger of "Hearsteria," or whatever else you may call it, and the belief is that he will be able to whip the radical democrats into line for the regular party candidate for Governor.

That Bryan is in sympathy with this movement is shown by a letter which he wrote to one of his friends, and which was mailed in Constantinople.

In it he dwells upon the Hearst movement at length and winds up by saying: "It is time to call a halt on socialism in the United States. The movement has gone too far. It must be checked now, and checked decisively."

That Mayor McClellan and his forces will join in the movement is shown by a statement by "Big Tim" Sullivan, who is the real Tammany ruler of New York. He declares he is in favor of the re-nomination of Bryan, and that Richard Croker will return to the United States expressly to attend the national convention as a delegate, and to cast the Empire State's votes for the man from Nebraska.

Letter From Mr. Emmitt

Keno, June 12, 1906.

To the Republican of Klamath County—In order to properly explain, a short history is necessary. In 1888 I was nominated by the powers then existing for the office of state board of equalization of the first judicial district for the purpose presumably of being slaughtered with the hope presumably that I would forever afterward keep quiet, but an unexpected landslide slid me in.

In 1900 after a bitter fight I was nominated and elected to the legislature and allied myself with and assisted in the election of Senator Mitchell, which I feel safe in saying was entirely satisfactory to ninety-five per cent of the Republican party of Klamath county at that time.

In 1902 after another bitter contest I was again nominated and elected to the house of representatives and assisted in the election of Senator Fulton in which perhaps not more than a dozen republicans in the county opposed. In 1904 I was treacherously defeated for the nomination for state senator at the special instance and request of the Simonites of Lake and Klamath counties by which the prestige justly due Klamath was willfully transferred to Grant county.

Then came the peace conference of the republican party called by the chairman of the Republican State Central committee to which both factions of the party attended and it was not only unanimously resolved in plain terms by those present but tacitly understood by those absent to lay aside all party differences and unite in one common cause—the success of the party, disregarding past differences.

Now in the election just past there were five candidates for the nomination for the office of county judge, both previous factions being represented whether by arrangement or accident matters not, with both verbal and tacit understanding that the winner was to be loyally supported by the defeated. This was not done. Three of the four losers have said by their actions, "if I can't get it I would rather throw it to a democrat."

One of the four arose to the moral agency that loyalty to party was superior to personal desires, while the other three were only republicans for personal interest. Had I used either deception, intrigue or chicanery in securing the nomination the opposition in election of these three as well as other republicans would have been justifiable, for republicans ought to know, and with few exceptions do, that it is bad policy to obtain nominations by fraud or deceit.

I certainly won this nomination fair and with but very little effort on my part, while under the new primary law to depart from fairness is scarcely possible.

If the republican party didn't want me why did they nominate me? After they nominated me why didn't they elect me? They certainly had the votes.

Does my defeat indicate that the factions have again thrown down the scepter of peace and manifest their intention to fight to annihilation? Are such people republicans in a true sense? Think of a county with a handsome republican majority with democrats holding the offices! The only admirable thing of the democratic party is their loyalty to party interests. They will flock out of the woods at the bugle call and vote for anything named democrat. Why can't all republicans do likewise? I know men who supported me heartily for the nomination and fought me with equal zeal in the election. I know a man who paraded his sample ballot on the street marked Chamberlain, Galloway and Griffith, and says he is a republican—this same man furnished gallons of liquor to elect a preacher to office while preacher Lee gambled $20 on the result.

Such ought to make a christian spirit blush with shame. The right way is for republicans to put up republicans and vote for and elect republicans to office.

Relegate to the rear in fact eliminate from the party the wolves in sheep's clothing and let them go to the democrats, populists or pintoes or wherever they belong; then and not until then can it be determined without asking that Klamath county is supporting the national administration, for no stranger would even surmise or suggest such a thing when he is informed that the democrats are holding the offices.

the earth, the party should benefit and being business at the old stand in a further recommendation to its principles and standing before the world.

I ask those who skilfully supported me either from a personal or party standpoint.

Respectfully Yours,
R. A. EMMITT.

GETTING BACK TO NATURE

French Peasant Who Had His Own Idea of France's Principal Danger.

The French peasant who, since the days of the revolution, has turned all France into a kind of walled garden, is still closely in touch with nature, and in spite of agitators and politicians, his presence in the suffrage, to which he brings the sense and cunning of the fields, makes for national health. In proof of this, says Youth's Companion, is a little scene reproduced by one of the authors of "Sketches on the Old Road Through France to Florence."

Between Argentan and Alencon the writer fell to conversing with a peasant who, with immense patience, was engaged in stirring the earth with vitor into harvest. He also professed himself interested in politics and economics, and willingly talked on these subjects.

"There is only one thing," the peasant said, at last, "that France has to fear."

"You mean," said the writer, "this religious question—the dispute with church and pope?"

"No, I don't mean that."

"Do you think there's any fear of another German war?"

"I don't know. I wasn't thinking of that."

"I suppose you are not afraid of socialism?"

"Not at all."

"Well, then, what is the only thing France has to fear?"

"Hah," said the peasant, and went on digging.

A SPANIARD'S INVENTION.

Ingenuous Apparatus for the Control of Distant Electric Power.

Telekino is the invention of Don Bernardo Torres Quevedo, a distinguished Spanish engineer, who has been experimenting successfully with an apparatus for the control of distant electric power by means of wireless telegraphy. He intends to apply his invention to vessels and make his public trials with them. The transmitting station was a wireless telegraphic apparatus. The boat carried a battery of accumulators, a motor for driving the propeller, another for the rudder, and two servo motors for operating the mechanism of the other motors. The servo motors were connected directly with the telekino, wherewith they formed a single apparatus. Hertz waves were received by the telekino; this controls the servo motors, which sent currents either to control the rudder motor or the propeller motor so as to govern both the steering and the propulsion of the boat. Taking up his position at the transmitting station, Senor Quevedo began manipulating the transmitter, whereupon the boat, containing numerous press representatives, as if by magic, slowly moved forward, gradually attaining a high speed, turning, twisting, tacking, advancing, or receding just as if it were being guided by an expert steersman. The boat executed all manner of maneuvers without a hitch under the sole guidance of the inventor on shore.

VETERAN POSTMASTERS.

Two Who Have Served Uncle Sam in That Capacity for Very Long Periods.

Another of the many instances where faithful service has proved a barrier against interference for political reasons with the service of a Massachusetts postmaster is that of John S. Fay, of Marlboro, who has been in charge of that office since April 26, 1865, when he was appointed by President Johnson at a salary of $1,100. He had been successively re-appointed, twice by Grant, once by Hayes, Arthur, Harrison and McKinley, and came under Mr. Cleveland's special care in each of his two terms. Mr. Fay has over two years yet to serve under the reappointment given by President Roosevelt February 23, 1903, when the salary was advanced to $2,500 per year.

Milo T. Winchester is believed to hold the long-service record as postmaster. He is still performing his duties in charge of the office at South Amenia, Dutchess county, New York under the commission first given him July 10, 1849. The record was held for many years by Roswell Beardsley at the North Lansing (N. Y.) office. He was appointed June 28, 1828, and served until his death, November 8, 1902, at the age of 93.

Liquor and Insurance. At the annual meeting of the Ab-stainers' and General Insurance company held in Birmingham recently the chairman announced that the mortality rate, favorable to the company, the lives insured had again been maintained and that in the 21 years of the company's existence the mortality had not yet exceeded 50 per cent of what might have been expected from the ordinary standard table of the Institute of Actuaries, which represented an enormous saving of interest on capital that otherwise would have been paid in claims. He attributed the satisfactory mortality record largely to the members abstaining from the use of alcoholic liquor.

Electricity in Siberia.

Almost all the towns in Siberia are having arc lights for street use and incandescent lights for houses, and the larger proportion of the people in Siberia have never seen gas, which they regard as an illuminant of a past age.
