TIMBERLAND, ACT JUNE 5, 1905—NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.
 United States Land Office, Lakeview, Oregon
 May 16, 1906.
 Notice is hereby given that in compliance with the provisions of the act of Congress of June 5, 1905, entitled "An act for the sale of timber lands in the States of California, Oregon, Nevada, and Washington Territory," as extended to all the Public Land States by act of August 4, 1902.
 Fred H. Mills, of Klamath Falls, county of Klamath, state of Oregon, has this day filed in this office his sworn statement No. 3097, for the purchase of the SE1/4, NE1/4, and SE1/4, of Section No. 36, in Township No. 28 South Range No. 2 E. W. M., and will offer proof to show that the land sought is more valuable for its timber or stone than for agricultural purposes and to establish his claim to said land before the Clerk of Klamath County, Oregon, at his office at Klamath Falls, Oregon, on Thursday, the 2nd day of August, 1906.
 He names as witnesses: H. A. Willis, E. B. Henry, John Schallack, and Jack Kimball all of Klamath Falls, Oregon.
 Any and all persons claiming adversely the above-described lands are requested to file their claims in this office on or before said 2nd day of August, 1906. J. N. Watson, Register.

TALKS THAT ARE TOLD.
 A grasp of the main facts, rather than facility of expression, characterizes the following historical contribution from a schoolboy: "Henry the Eighth was brave, corpulent and cruel; he was frequently married to a widow; had an ulcer on his leg; and great decision of character."
 This story is told of a nice old resident of Crookline, who recently addressed a class of young women at an educational institution, and who advised them to go in for the active life. "Do not, and do not, be something," he exclaimed, "become fishers of men," and he wondered why the audience flattered.
 Prof. Tait, of Edinburgh university, asked one of his students to define transparent, translucent and opaque. The young man dealt with the query in this way: "I cannot precisely define these terms, but I can indicate their meaning in this way: the windows of the classroom were once transparent, they are now translucent and if not cleaned very soon they will be opaque." The answer gained full marks from the amused professor.
 James H. O'Brien, the wealthy California miner, was standing on the steps of a San Francisco hotel, when a seedy citizen came and hailed him: "Hello, Jim. How are ye?" Mr. O'Brien at first did not know the man, and, thinking the stranger was a professional beggar, he said: "Who the dickens are you?" "You don't know me, eh?" said the dissipated party. "Say, Jim; I was quarts o' wine when you were pints o' beer." The rich man by this time had recognized a friend of former days, and a satisfactory interview followed.
 The late Thomas L. Clark, bishop of Rhode Island, widely known as a wit and scholar, in his own home life in Providence preferred the utmost simplicity compatible with comfort. Having on one occasion a distinguished English divine as a visitor, the latter was considerably impressed, not to say astonished, at the lack of ceremony observed in the episcopal mansion, and upon retiring hesitatingly inquired if he should leave his shoes outside his door. "Certainly, if you like," replied the bishop, with cordiality, "nobody'll touch 'em."

WOMEN IN MEDICAL FIELD.
 Out of 15 applications for the post of assistant medical officer of the Bracebridge (Lincolnshire, Eng.) lunatic asylum, Miss Jessie B. Hunter was selected. Miss Hunter has occupied the position of a private asylum in Lincolnshire since 1902, and has held the position of assistant house surgeon at Glasgow infirmary. She is a M. B. and C. B. of Glasgow university.
 Dr. Mary Stone, of Australia, sent a paper to the national women's congress urging the establishment of "epileptic colonies." In view of the fact that the ranks of criminals are continually and materially reinforced by children, weak-minded, moral and physical degenerates who are easily led into vice, and she asks for the segregation of these unfortunate that their kind may not be multiplied.
 Taking credit that belongs to others deserves no one so much as yourself.
 Dr. L. Rosa Minoka is a young Indian doctor, who, having won honors as a graduate of the Women's Medical college of Pennsylvania and served with credit as resident physician of the Women's hospital, of Philadelphia, has now opened an office in the city. She is said to be not only a fine doctor but a handsome and interesting young woman.

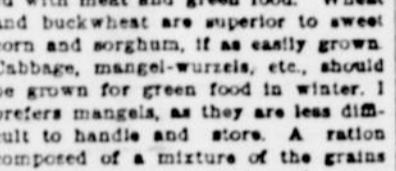

It is said that there are now in France 80 women doctors, 30 of whom are in regular practice. The way, until within the last 25 years, has been made very difficult for women who desired to practice medicine. There is little chivalric feeling in the country, and open derision and insulting refusal to all applications for opportunities to study have been the rule. Persistence—a great revulsion of feeling—or manner—and at present the woman doctor is encouraged and smiled upon—a pleasant change.

IN THE FIELD OF LETTERS.
 The old brick house in Cincinnati in which Thomas Buchanan Read wrote "Sheridan's Ride" is to be torn down to make room for a factory.
 Several lady novelists are excellent speakers. Mme. Sarah Grand takes a high place in the list. Miss Marie Corelli is quite a gifted speaker. Rita could give points to many men who think they can make a good after-dinner speech, and "Ouida" can address an audience in three or four languages.
 Perhaps no writer of magazine fiction can equal the speed record made by Edwin Lefevre. He produced 18,000 words between Saturday and Monday, all written in longhand, for Mr. Lefevre doesn't use a typewriter. The mere physical labor of penciling out this enormous quantity of copy would be no mean undertaking in itself to many of the craft, but Mr. Lefevre is a newspaper man, the financial editor of a New York daily, and as such he does not consider a mere matter of 6,000 words a day a feat worth boasting of.
 In England, it is said, competition in the trade is enhancing the prices paid to authors of the first class. To secure a book by a popular author nowadays it is often necessary to make arrangements with him not months but years before it is written. There is one well-known writer who, it is asserted, has filled up his programme of books with the publishers who are to produce them up to 1914. And it is one of the risks which publishers have to face that the author's powers may have diminished or his popularity waned before the contract is fulfilled.

Just Her Sentiments.
 Merrit—A man shouldn't bother a woman by talking business.
 Cora—That's right, dear. If you mean business, go and talk to papa.—Tit-Bits.

ADVICE FOR A BEGINNER.
 Everything in the Poultry Business Depends on Getting a Successful Start.
 "I am starting a poultry business here and I have sufficient ground to raise all my feed (excepting fresh meat), and wish some suggestions as to what is best to raise. I have corn, oats, Kaffir corn, sweet corn and sorghum planted; I have 20 acres of tillable land. Also, how many hens per rooster for breeding purposes give best results? Also, how much fresh meat per 100 fowls, and how often should it be fed? How shall I divide my running yards? Also, would it be advisable to place broods and running yards in an old orchard?"
 To the above inquirer Mr. L. E. Keyser replies in the Ohio Farmer as follows:
 You have a sufficient variety of foods when the grains are supplemented with meat and green food. Wheat and buckwheat are superior to sweet corn and sorghum, if as easily grown. Cabbage, mangels-wurzels, etc., should be grown for green food in winter. I prefer mangels, as they are less difficult to handle and store. A ration composed of a mixture of the grains named, with green food and meat, should be divided about as follows: Whole and ground grain, 55 per cent; green food, 20 per cent; animal food, 15 per cent. It is best to feed meat every day, giving about four and one-half pounds to each 100 fowls. If you can secure fresh bones from the butcher and have a bone cutter, this is probably the best meat supply. If bones are difficult to secure, feed a good grade of beef scraps.
 The number of females to one male varies with the different breeds. For the lighter and more active breeds, such as Laghona, 20; Plymouth Rocks, 15 to 20; Brahmae, 10 or 12 are safe numbers.
 In locating a poultry plant it is a great advantage to have the houses all face the south or southeast. House room 12x12 is sufficient for 25 fowls, and the yards 24x100 feet are also about right for this number. Your plan is good if the houses all face the south. The runs may extend from the north side if desired. An old orchard is an ideal place for locating a poultry plant, and is especially valuable as a run for growing stock. Another excellent plan is to have houses in the middle of the runs, making them 50 feet deep on each side of house.
 The accompanying plan is a good one. Houses are 10x12 feet, divided into two pens each 10x12, holding 25 fowls each. Yards, 12x50; two to each pen; one in front and one in rear of house. The hens can be allowed to occupy both yards, or may be confined to one yard while a forage crop is growing in the other. Portable fence may be moved from one side to the other, thus saving half the cost of lay there the ground on one side of the houses clear for cultivation. The houses all face the south. This plan may be extended to accommodate any number of fowls.

HELPFUL POULTRY HINTS.
 Disinfectants are better than disease.
 The chicken coops should be large, airy and proof against rain.
 A boiled egg which is done will dry quickly on the shell when taken from the kettle.
 Sawdust, shavings and excelsior are objectionable for nest material. Use straw or leaves.
 Wooden floors close to the ground attract the damp from the earth, and are always moist.
 The dust heap aids materially to cleanse the feathers and skin from vermin and impurities.
 The eggs from hens by themselves will keep good three times as long as those that are fertile.
 Sell off the surplus cockerels and do not retain the late-hatched pullets, as they will not lay until spring.
 In feeding fowls at any time, whether in confinement or not, give only so much as they will eat up clean.—American Tribune.
Oyster Shells for the Hens.
 Did you ever stop to consider that one-tenth of the shell of an egg is lime? The shells must be strong and heavy if they stand shipment, and if you expect to get the highest market price, you surely can afford to buy oyster shells at 75 cents a hundred pounds to produce egg shells that sell at from 13 to 20 cents a pound. Do not deprive your hens of so important an article of necessary diet.—Midland Farmer.
When the Hens Begin to Mope.
 When birds begin to mope around, not caring to eat and their odors are found to be offensive, there is trouble that must be attended to at once or more complicated diseases will set in and many birds may die. The disease is indigestion, caused by feeding too much rich food. As soon as discovered the birds should be put on a plain diet, which should be reduced in quantity as well as quality. With their diet it will be wise to mix a little powdered charcoal or give the birds rhubarb pills, one grain to each chick.—Commercial Poultry.
