

FOUND DEAD IN BATH HOUSE

Mike Moore's Body Discovered Last Tuesday Morning

Mike Moore, a recent arrival in Klamath Falls, was found dead at 5:15 Tuesday morning, lying in the water in one of the bath houses in the east end of the city.

The body was found by H. E. Childers, who went down for his regular morning plunge. The body was lying on its back with the head in about seven inches of water, covering all but the nose and a small portion of the face.

Coroner Martin summoned the following jury, which met and held an inquest at 10 o'clock: C. D. Willson, foreman, W. O. Smith, Ky Taylor, C. K. Brandenburg, Marion Hanks and W. C. Sanderson.

Oliver Head, of Peard, who arrived here Monday evening, was the first witness. He stated that he left Keno shortly after noon Monday and came here to work for Steve Low. He recognized the deceased as a man who rode with him from Keno. He first met him on the other side of Keno, where the man asked him to give him a ride to Pokeyama.

The night barkeeper at Bich's and others testified that he had been in and out of the Klamath bar up to nearly 12 o'clock Monday night, drinking considerably and paying for his drinks. He spent about four or five dollars at Bich's after he left the Bich's saloon he went to the saloon owned by Barnes & Antin, where he had two or three more drinks and remained until between one and two o'clock.

George Matthews, who works on the canal, stated that he had met the deceased early Monday evening and recognized him as a man who had worked at Brooks' camp on the Weed road some time ago. He did not remember his name, but when at Brooks', he had told him that he had been prospecting around Oroville, Cal., and that his home was in Kansas City, Mo.

A message was received from Keno stating that the man's name was Mike Moore and that he had worked for Wm.

PARTED BY DIVORCE

Mrs. Oscar C. Stone Freed From Her Worthless Husband

Bessie May Stone, a daughter of Thomas Guinean, a well-known resident of Portland, was granted a divorce from Oscar C. Stone, to whom she was united in marriage at Spokane July 27, 1900.

They went there, Mrs. Stone testified, and Stone sold her piano and furniture and spent the money.

Mrs. Stone further complained that in July, 1902, she went with her husband to Butte, where he was to establish himself in business. She afterward learned that he had left Portland to avoid arrest for criminal offenses.

Stone, it is charged, conducted a timberland office in Portland, and he swindled Dr. C. W. Cornelius and others. He was brought back to Portland from Idaho, where he was living under an assumed name, and was tried. The jury disagreed and after he had been in jail a long time he was released.

Another charge made by Mrs. Stone was that Stone choked and kicked her at Klamath Falls in January, 1905, because her father refused to send him any more money. The last she heard of Stone he was in jail at Pendleton awaiting trial on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. The papers were served on Stone in the Umatilla County jail.

Stone is well-known in this city, where his record was an unenviable one, and his departure clouded by having abused the confidence of those who befriended him.

McCollum cutting shingle bolts and that he had prospected last winter on Feather river in California.

The deceased was a man about 45 or 50 years of age, weight about 160 pounds. He was of Irish descent and spoke with a slight accent. When found he was lying on his back in the water and his clothes were on the ground outside of the building. He carried a heart-shaped brooch which he had shown to a number of people, but which was not found on his clothes. The only things found by the coroner were a sack of tobacco, matches, a slip of paper containing a list of groceries and two small pieces of quartz. He appeared to have had about $10, about five of this he spent at Keno and the remainder here.

The coroner's jury rendered a verdict that the deceased came to his death from drowning, while in an intoxicated condition. The body was turned over to the undertaker for burial.

Col. M. G. Wilkins left for Payallup Sunday morning, whether he was summoned by the death of his eight year old grandson, who died Friday. The Colonel was foster father to the boy, and feels the loss keenly, for he was a great favorite of his.

CALIFORNIANS TAKE IN SIGHTS GOLDEN STATE VISITORS SURPRISED RESOURCES AND POSSIBILITIES FAR EXCEED EXPECTATIONS

Visit Henley, Merrill and Pelican Bay and are Overwhelmed With Hospitality

Vastness of Water Supply and Government Ditch Open Eyes of Excursionists Marvel at the Grandeur of Upper Lake Scenery and Fishing

"We came; we saw; we are conquered! That sums up in a nutshell the opinion of every member of the party of excursionists; and when we return to our homes it will be as walking advertisements of the greatness of the Klamath Basin."

This is the opinion of one of the leading members of the party of California excursionists who arrived here Monday night. They were met by the reception committee at Pokeyama, Spencer's and Keno. At Spencer's arrangements had been made to provide a luncheon for the visitors, and when they boarded the steamer Klamath at Keno they were again made aware of the hospitality of the people of this county, for elaborate refreshments had been prepared for them, and on the trip up the river they had ample opportunity to satisfy their hunger.

On reaching this city a delegation of the Chamber of Commerce, a large number of citizens and the Military band met them at the boat landing and escorted them to the hotel. After removing the stains of travel and meeting a few of the leading citizens of the county, they "took in" the city by night. They were greatly surprised at what they saw, and realized a giant was springing up among the peaks of the Cascades, that ere long would be queen of southern Oregon and one that would have no peer from Portland to San Francisco.

Tuesday morning the party drove to Merrill, where a most cordial and hospitable reception was accorded them. Much has been said about the inability of Merrillites to "warm up" to the stranger. But the accusation is a wrong one. Every citizen of that bustling little town was equal to the occasion, and if anyone left feeling that ample courtesies had not been extended, it was his own fault, for nothing was left undone to show the visitors that Merrill stands ready to extend the warm hand of friendship to everyone.

The Merrill Trip The party left this city for Merrill at 7:30 Tuesday. Stops were made at the Cantrill and Henley ranches, where they had their eyes opened to the possibilities of this county. J. D. Carroll extended to them every possible courtesy, and the brief stop was thoroughly enjoyed. On reaching Merrill they went directly to the opera house, where a feast was in waiting. Everything, down to the minutest detail, had been carefully prepared.

The long tables, loaded down with delicacies, were tastily decorated. Provision had been made for about 150 guests, and the supply of chicken, cold ham, buttermilk, soda water, ice cream, cake, etc., seemed almost inexhaustible. During the lunch the orchestra rendered most pleasing music, and much favorable comment was heard on the work of the boys.

Judge Geo. T. Baldwin acted as toastmaster, and short addresses were made. N. S. Merrill, the patriarch of Merrill, extended a most cordial welcome to the visitors, and hoped to see them in Merrill often. He was followed by J. Frank Adams, who made them a short talk in his practical way. Project Engineer Murphy gave a brief outline of what the government proposes to do and has already done. C. N. Hawkins followed in his inimitable style and stirred up the spirits, as well as the serious thought of his hearers.

George W. Sill of Watsonville, California, who is one of the largest apple growers and shippers in California, followed Mr. Hawkins. He expressed his admiration for the Klamath basin, and believed the near future would see it the peer of nearly all, if not all, of the Pacific coast. Mr. Sill is a practical, successful, observant business man—one who has had experience enough to make him a competent judge, and his remarks made a profound impression on his hearers.

After lunch the party was driven through Merrill, then to the Adams ranch, where they had an opportunity to see where many of the fine herds that supply the Frisco market were raised. From there they drove to the Whitney ranch and back to the Merrill landing, where they boarded the boat for the return trip.

To Pelican Bay. Wednesday the excursionists were treated to a series of surprises. They boarded the Winema at the Buena Vista landing, and started on their trip to Pelican Bay. Expecting meagre transportation facilities, their eyes were opened by the trim and neat Winema, and, as one expressed it, "It's like finding an oasis in a desert to find a boat of this character so far inland. The beauties of the Upper Lake far exceeded their expectations, and when the Bay came in sight, with its setting of Mt. Pitt to the north and Shasta to the south, surrounded with pine-clad hills and dotted with patches of snow, they could hardly believe their eyes. That the near future will see the greatest summer resort in the west located at Pelican Bay, Odessa and the Spence ranch, is certain, for nature has done her work too well to permit its neglect.

Mine host Rice of the Lodge sustained his reputation for hospitality, and nothing was left undone that would promote the comfort, pleasure and convenience of the guests. Fishing was fine, and as the visitors gazed through the crystal waters and saw the members of the finny tribe lazily waiting for bait, they lost no time in getting the fishing tackle ready. Cashier Dalsell made the catch of the day, landing a 20-pounder. The temptation was too great for many, and they remained behind for a day or two to enjoy the beauties and pleasures of this delightful resort.

In discussing it, one of the party said: "We Californians are thoroughly familiar with irrigation. It is the very life of our state. But we are not familiar with the impossibility of drought. That is always a nightmare with us. Here it is different. With this great lake as your source of supply, there is no danger of a failure of water supply, even though snow and rain failed for several years. From what I have already seen I am thoroughly satisfied that this is to be one of the greatest sections on the Pacific coast. This is a broad assertion, but I make it without fear of contradiction. I have seen what irrigation has done for our state, and what has been accomplished there will be duplicated here. Of course, you are out of the citrus belt, but there are other things yielding greater returns than the citrus fruits."

"The members of this party, though anticipating a good deal, have been agreeably surprised. One of the most favorable impressions made on us is accredited to the hospitality of your people. There was no friction, no wire-pulling. Everyone was for this section as a whole. If this spirit is manifested at all times, to individuals as well as parties, it will do much to build up your section. The country is as dependent on the cities as the cities are on the country, and both must work hand in hand to achieve success."

Thursday and Friday the excursionists will take in the sights of this city and adjacent country, when they will return to their homes. The trip was a success in every sense that that term implies, and it is only the forerunner of a series of a like nature.

SALOONS OBSERVE LAW

Close on Sunday as Directed by the Mayor and Council.

As a result of the recent action of the city council, the saloons were closed all day last Sunday, and there has been no gambling, at least no open gambling, since 12 o'clock Saturday night.

The saloon men seem to have accepted the new order of things with very little grumbling. The professional gamblers, however, and their sympathizers, are not such good losers, and the loudest complaints are from that quarter. The general public is well satisfied and the action of the council is warmly approved by even the majority of saloon patrons.

The decision of the council was made without any previous agitation or flourish of trumpets. It was simply a cool business-like and effective determination. Nor does the council intend to assume the responsibility of enforcing all the laws of the state or the United States. It concerns itself with the laws of the city, although if the city ordinance seems defective or not easy of enforcement, the city authorities will act under state laws that cover the same offense.

Those who decry the council's determination to have its ordinances decently observed, claim that the state law against the Sunday opening of stores, shops, etc., should also be enforced; but this claim is only made for the purpose of discrediting the city authorities' law-enforcing. A clothing store or candy shop violates no city ordinance by keeping open on Sunday. A saloon does. The saloon has a license, and pays for it, to keep open six days in the week. The license itself specially states that the saloon shall not be kept open on Sunday. Hereafter, a saloon that opens on Sunday will have its license revoked. If any of the objectors to the council's attitude desire, in retaliation, to enforce any state laws which do not concern the Council as a city council, they can initiate proceedings themselves.

Just how far gambling can be stopped is, of course, problematical. The city authorities do not expect to expect to achieve the impossible. But they do know that public gambling and bank and percentage games can and will be permanently stopped, and professional gamblers will find their occupation gone, so far as Klamath Falls is concerned, and those who champion the cause of the professional gambler and tin-horn will shortly miss their clients.

The council has not started a moral wave or religious revival. It simply intends to have its ordinances observed; and the other city officials can be depended upon to carry out the Council's desires.

The Republican is in receipt of a season ticket to the 13th annual assembly of the Willamette Valley Chautauque Association, to be held in Gladstone Park, Oregon City, July 10 to 22. An extensive program will be carried out, and it is expected to make it the best Assembly in the history of the Association.

SUCCEEDS J. B. LIPPINCOTT

D. C. Henney Becomes Supervising Engineer

By the resignation of J. B. Lippincott, supervising engineer for the United States Reclamation Bureau in the California District, D. C. Henney, supervising engineer for Oregon and Washington, will be promoted to have charge of the work on the entire coast as far south as Santa Barbara. The Southern California district will be added to that of Engineer Hill, of Arizona.

This action adds the California territory to the Oregon and Washington district, making it certain that the headquarters of the engineer for this district will be retained in Portland. The Klamath Falls project will now come under the jurisdiction of Engineer Henney. The scheme was formerly handled by Engineer Lippincott.

Mr. Henney expects to come here immediately to get in touch with the details of the project, so that he can direct the work from the Portland office.

SURVEYORS COMING

Will Begin Cross-Sectioning From This End of Line

Construction Engineer Hoey, of the California-Northeastern has detailed a corps of his engineers to come to Klamath Falls and begin the work of cross-sectioning this end of the line. This work is being done at this to admit of dredging of the roadbed through the tule lands, which work he arranged for when here two weeks ago. The dredging is to be done by J. Frank Adams.

There is no likelihood of other construction work on this line being commenced on this end. This is due to the fact that it is practically impossible to get men and material. The force now at work between Grass Lake and Mt. Helron has been secured only after the hardest kind of skirmishing, hundreds of men having engaged as far east as El Paso, Texas, and Utah. Only a very small per cent of those employ ever reach the terminus of the road. Being furnished with transportation, they come to the coast, and on reaching Weed continue on north. Many of those who do reach the grading camps only remain a few days, and then strike out for other fields.

This transportation of laborers has been the source of great expense, for their railroad fare must be paid, and while special rates are provided for such people, yet the aggregate runs into thousands of dollars.

"Few inland towns in America are so favorably located or have such pleasant surroundings as Klamath Falls," was the remark of a visitor recently. "Besides its close relations to a rich farming region, its mountain scenery is a joy to behold, while the lake at its foot is a most charming resort for aquatic sport, and the inland sea on its northern border is a thing of beauty to make the heart glad."

THE CARPENTER'S UNION

In last week's issue a mistake was made in stating that the newly organized carpenter's union had decided to arbitrarily demand eight hours a day and a scale of $3.50 to $4.50 per day. The information was furnished from an outside, and what was believed to be a reliable source. Had the union made known its purposes to this paper, the error would not have occurred.

An officer of the union states that no change in present conditions is to be made until after organization is perfected. As yet no charter has been issued, but it is expected shortly. Then the question of fixing working hours and a scale will be considered. What ever action is taken at that time will go into force only after due notice is given and ample time allowed contractors to protect themselves.

The officers of the union are, George Hamilton, president; A. M. Taylor, vice president; W. P. McMillan, treasurer; A. E. Bamber, secretary; George North, conductor; O. E. Hurst, warden.

Street Railway Situation

A. H. Natzger, president of the California-Northeastern, arrived here last Friday. He had no public statement to relative to the street railway situation. C. N. Hawkins, head of the Klamath Canal company, arrived here Monday. He was equally reticent on the subject. Both gentlemen, however, admitted a conference was possible, and it is understood that the question of reaching an agreement will be taken up to-day.

JAMES CALVIN SIGLER

James Calvin Sigler died at his home in this city, Saturday, July 7, death being due to heart and stomach trouble, from he had been a sufferer for several years. Under the auspices of the A. O. U. W. Lodge, of which the deceased was a member, the funeral was held Saturday afternoon. He is survived by a wife, and one son, who reside in this city; four daughters, two of whom live in Bickleton, Wash.; one in Bisbee, Arizona, and one in Yakima City, Wash.; one brother residing here, and three residing in Modoc county, Cal.

Mr. Sigler was fifty-three years of age. He first came to this county about 25 years ago, but only the past seven years were of continuous residence. During that time he engaged in various lines of business, and was quite successful. He was a man who was well liked and leaves a host of friends who mourn his death and who extend their sympathy to the bereaved family.

Mr. E. M. Furman is locating here in the piano business. He lays claim to be the pioneer dealer, as he first established in 1878 in this state. He sold goods in Klamath Falls more than 25 years ago, and now has a shipment of pianos on the way to this place. Those who may want pianos will do well to get prices and terms from Mr. Furman. He is conducting a business in Coos county, Oregon, and in several of the best localities in California.

HIGH POSITION FOR KLAMATH BOY

Claude R. Fountain, nephew of P. L. and John Fountain, of this city, has been elected to the chair of physics in Williams College, Massachusetts, one of the old established and high class colleges of the New England states.

Professor Fountain is a Klamath Falls boy, having graduated from the public school in this city, after which he passed through the State University of Oregon and Columbia University, New York.

WORKMEN IN STALL OFFICERS

The following officers were installed by district deputy Geo. T. Baldwin of the A. O. U. W. Lodge on Tuesday evening: W. O. Smith, P. M. W.; Roy Hamaker, M. W.; John Yaden, Foreman; Frank Wilson, Overseer; J. W. Stemen, Recorder; Geo. T. Baldwin, Receiver; Alex Martin Jr., Financier; Walter Lenox, Guide; Emil Egert, Inside Guard; W. W. Baldwin, Outside Guard.

In his remarks after the ceremonies, Judge Baldwin stated that twenty years ago he assisted in installing the late J. W. Hamaker, father of the present M. W., as the first Master Workman of Linkville Lodge number 110.

Rev. Father Feusi who has been absent for the past two weeks, returned from Lakeview Friday. During his visit to that town he made arrangements for the purchase of some land on which to erect a new church, which will probably be done next year. The response to his appeal was generous. There will be services at the Catholic Church next Sunday.
