"I like your yarn and I honestly be lieve it fairly measures Mr. Roosevelt's capacity to recall people he has met. You say the president is like Biaine in that respect, and I think he is also like him in others. Blaine was famous for his apt sayings, and I can prove to you that Roosevelt is not far behind him. I was in the east a few years ago late in the fall and happened to be in Philadelphia one afternoon with nothing to do. I looked the papers over to see where I should go and noticed all kinds of stuff about the football game between the army and navy teams-the annual contest between the West Pointers and the Annapolis cadets. The idea of seeing this spectacle pleased me and with the help of the hotel clerk I got one of the last tickets obtainable. I think the seat was on the navy side, but am not so sure.

"At all events I was lucky in getting a place near the boxes and almost opposite the center of the field. In a box not far from me sat Mrs. Grover Cleveland with a party of friends. Her distinguished husband was not with her; the people about me said he couldn't be hired to stay a whole afternoon in the cold to watch a lot of youngsters pound each other's ribe in. His wife enjoyed the game, however. During the intermission we noticed a movement directly across the gridiron, and it was whispered that President Roosevelt and party were about to come over to our side. Every one becan to cheer and the president lifted his hat and laughed as the rooters for either team hailed him with clever remarks and hurled bits of wit his way. "When he was close to the tier of boxes that were almost level with the ground the president noticed Mrs. Cleveland. He lifted his hat again, bowed and made directly for her. They shook hands and everybody there abouts tried to keep quiet to hear what he had to say. I heard enough to convince me that he is just about as clever a talker as Blaine was. Mrs. Cleve and said she was greatly pleased to see him again, and he replied with "Mrs. Cleveland laughed a good, ringing laugh and informed the president she would tell Mr. Cleveland about it. She then intimated with her well-known charm that Mr. Roosevelt was not considered a freshman in anything from fighting to statesmanship.

"And a story concerning Mr. Cleveland, Richard Olney and Mr. Roosevelt that Mr. Cleveland long ago believed Mr. Roosers bad a 'comer.' It hapand was secretary of the dry be went to the white house to res President Cleveland on metter of international importance.
