Tids friend was no less a person than Max Harwood, chief of the volunteer fire department of Norwood, commodore of the local yachting club and a bero in Willie's eyes. By some mysterious coincidence Commodore Max appeared on the scene with great promptness and frequency whenever Willie's aunt, Miss Marjory Dean, came for a visit, and as these visits had been suspense. rather numerous during the year just ed Willie knew him well enough to rummage through his pockets and to if you come, too, it will be all right." boast about their intimacy whenever any of the other boys needed a little

"Hello, Napoleon," cheertly called his hero. It was his fancy to call Willie by the names of the world's great generals, one after another.

"Good morning, commodore; aren't you coming in to see us?"

"Guess not, Hannibal; it's pretty early for company." "You have been earlier than this,"

said the child reproachfully.

"Well-er-I'm kind of busy this morning"-

Willie was turning away to hide the hurt look in his eyes. Nobody wanted to bother him. Max saw this and hastily added:

"But get your cap and come along. I'm going down to fix up the boat. You

He told her breathlessly, and she listened to his admiration of the commonore with rising color.

"sn't be perfectly splendid, Aunt Macjorie? They say there are ten elephants and the lions growl something awful! But I won't be afraid with the commodore. Only I wish you were coming too. Wouldn't you like it? I'm sure he'd take you, too, if you J. E. Duval and T. F. Knackstedt, unasked him."

'No, honey, I-I don't think so. I is this day dissolved. don't expect to see the commodore again; we-we aren't friends any

"Ob, auntie!" exclaimed Willie, in genuine dismay. "And he's so good

Willie thought for a minute that his Aunt Marjorie was going to cry, and then he was surprised to hear her say in a manner singularly unlike her usual gentleness. "Maybe some people think he is good, but I know his true character, and I do not think you ought to go around alone with him." This speech was rendered with all the dignity that a woman of the world. aged nineteen, could muster.

You went with him alone to lots of places," complained Willie. "You wont last night." Yes, and that's just the reason I'm not going again. If a man takes a giri to a dance and forgets her he will certainly forget a little boy when he takes hint to the circus, and then what would Really this was awful. Willie had never seen his dear little aunt in such a state, but she was very sweet to him and took him out driving that after noon, stopping in the village to buy him candy and lots of fireworks for the Fourth. He didn't know what to think about his beloved commodore, but saw him the next day and promptly repeated the whole conversation. It seemed to him the simplest way out of the dif-

"Did you forget, commodore?" he in stated.

"Great Scott, Willie, maybe I did: she says so; but she wasn't lonesome," he said grimly. "Girls are queer creatures, Wellington; you'll find that out some day. But don't say another word about the circus. I'll fix it some way. You're going to see it as sure as your name is Vincingetorix."

So Willie kept his counsel and was petted much by his auntie for the next two days. On the morning of the Fourth he was firing off his crackers from the open window in his little nightelothes at 4 o'clock, and Marjorie said never a word of complaint. She had made up her mind to take him to the circus berself and to get away early to avoid any possible conflict with her former great friend, the commodorenow a stranger forever.

Before lunch was over, however, the commodore's touring car stopped at the door and the commodore was standing on the porch, cap in hand, aunouncing that he had come.

"Yes, I see," returned Marjorie cool ly, but deliberately avoiding his gaze. Max had such a way of looking at one.

"But what for?" "Why, to take my friend Julius Caesar to the circus. Willie looked anxiously from one to the other in an ecstasy of hope and

"I told Willie"-"Yes, I know," he interrupted, "bu "Oh, yes, auntie!" cried Willie, jumping with joyful anticipation. Marjorie tried hard to look cold and "Would you spoil that child's day?"

asked the commodore, coming closer "Marjorie, please!" His eyes urged her as well as his votce

She looked at him. "All right, I'll go But it's just on Willie's account." 'Any reason will do," responded Max as he helped her into the car.

But maybe you can find a better one before we get home. I'm going to ride back here with you and William." He lifted the delighted child, gave him a hug, and put him in the front seat with the chauffeur. "William the Conqueror is going to have the time of his

HOT SPRINGS WATER

Why not have you a home in the Hot Springs tract, where you can have use of the splendid mineral water?

Hot Springs addition is in the heart of the city of Klamath Falls, whose population will be 25000 in less than 10 years

Study the following analysis made by the University of Oregon:

	Groins per U. S. gallon
Sodium Chloride	5.68
Calcium Sulphate	6.52
Magnesium Sulphate
Sodium Sulphate
Iron and Aluminum Oxides
Sodium Silicate	4.15
Silica

Read what Dr. G. F. Hanson of San Francisco says of this water:

"A careful examination of the water convinces me that it is unsurpassed in the nature of its mineral content, and should prove of the greatest possible utility in the treatment of congested conditions and for the general flushing of the tissues. Dyspepsia, sluggish liver, habitual constipation, so-called billiousness and bilious headaches, indefinite rheumatic pains due to the accumulation of uric acid or retention of other waste products in the system, faulty elimination by the kidneys, and a long train of ailments dependent upon above states of bodily ill-health are benefited by the free drinking of and bathing in such waters.'
