KENO KINKS

Jack Frost is cutting logs for John Hitchcock.

The old strap the other night froze the pump at the mill.

Mr. Benson has the contract of putting logs down the chute to the mill for Hitchcock. They gasped.

Mr. and Mrs. Curran, senior, took the stage for the railroad, and are going to their California home, after spending a pleasant time visiting with the boys.

Mr. Dyer has made a change in the hotel business by installing a new cook and waiter. These came from Ashland. Mr. Dyer is to be congratulated in the good manner in which the cook delivers the goods.

Klamath Falls, Merrill, and Bonanza, have said a great deal about getting a railroad into their respective places; but if one may judge from the quiet work that is going on, and has been for some time, Keno will eat the desired plum before the other places get a bite at it. Watch and see.

On Thanksgiving there will be a shooting match for turkeys, and in the evening there will be a dance, and supper given at the hotel. Everybody invited to come.
