B. E. Jacobs, the sub-contractor on the tunnel, had a narrow escape from death Saturday morning. He undertook to go down shaft No. 1 without notifying the engineer. When the latter noticed the machinery it was going at a lively gate and he stopped it so suddenly that Mr. Jacobs' hold was loosened and he dropped to the bottom of the shaft, a distance of 20 feet. He was severely bruised but not seriously injured. If the engineer had not noticed the speed at which the cable was going down, Mr. Jacobs would undoubtedly have been killed. Dr. Cartwright states that he will be all right in a few days.
