The Awful Small Boy.

Mrs. B. was entertaining some ladies at a little 5 o'clock tea, and Bobby, who had been exceptionally well behaved, was in high feather.

"Ma," he said, as cake was being handed around, "may I have some tongue, please?"

"There isn't any tongue, Bobby."
"That's funny," commented Bobby. "I heard pa say there would be lots of it."—London Tit-Bits.

A Graver Offense.

A prisoner was brought before a police magistrate.

"Officer," he said, "what's this man charged with?"

"Bigotry, your honor. He's got three wives."

The magistrate looked at the officer as though astounded at his ignorance.

"Why, officer," he said, "that's not bigotry. That's trigonometry."—Detroit News.

Compensations.

"Are you happier now that you own your own home?" asked the solicitous friend.

"Of course," answered Mr. Meekton, "there is a proud satisfaction in having my own place. But occasionally I can't help longing for the time when my wife made her kick to the landlord for repairs instead of coming to me."—Washington Star.

Nerve Phobias.

There is a class of well defined "phobias," as they are called, with which nerve sufferers are plagued—"monophobia," or fear of being alone; "claustrophobia," or fear of closed spaces; "agoraphobia," or fear of crowds or of broad open spaces; "insomniaphobia," or fear of not going to sleep, and many others. The one great remedy for these mental miseries is auto-suggestion.—Good Housekeeping.

Ole Bull and His Fiddle.

Ole Bull, upon hearing a brilliant young pianist play, remarked to her: "You play beautifully, but you can't do the great music—no woman can. It takes the biceps of a man."

"My arm is strong enough," answered the girl, laughing. "I break my piano as well as a man could and have to have a new one every week."

"You see," responded the Norwegian, turning to another, "how these people treat their pianos. They break them, they beat them, they kick them, they smash them to pieces, but our fiddles, how we love them!"

Sandy's Retort.

A certain parish minister is a practical though not a cultured preacher. The other Sunday, when on his way home at the close of the afternoon service, he overtook Sandy Smart, the village half wit, slowly trudging along, and, being a bit of a wag, addressed him as follows:

"You've got an excellent pair of shoes on, Sandy, but, losh, man, they're sadly in need of blacking!"

"Aye, sir," readily replied Sandy. "They're like yer sermons—unco destitute o' polish!"—Dundee People's Journal.

Smothered in Roses.

Roses have been used with the most lavish prodigality throughout the ages, and fabulous sums have been expended for them. Nero at a single banquet ordered $100,000 worth of roses to be used, and when he visited the house of a noble he required that its fountain should spout rose water. We have the record of another banquet at which the ceiling was opened, and the guests were showered with roses. This was first greeted with exclamations of delight, but the flowers continued to fall until the despot had smothered his guests with roses.—Circle.

Not Worth a Rap.

Dean Swift, in his "Drapier's Letters," employs the expression in several places of rap, applied to base brass and copper coins. Thus, in his first letter, speaking of the scarcity of halfpence and farthings, he states, "Many counterfeits passed about under the name of raps" (see volume 4, page 68, Falkner's edition, 1735). He also mentions raps more than once in his third letter. The rap was well known in Dublin previous to the universal circulation of her majesty's present bronze coinage.—Notes and Queries.

After experimenting with forty-one persons, M. N. Vaschide concluded that sleep in the day is more superficial, less continuous and less recuperative than sleep in the night. Except in cases of extreme mental or physical fatigue sleep in the day does not reach the depth of nocturnal sleep.

Mrs. Housekeep—I'll give you a good meal if you'll light the fire in the range for me. Weary Walker—All right, lady. Mrs. Housekeep—Here's a hatchet, then. Just chop some of the wood and—Weary Walker—Oh, I say, lady, I thought it wuz a gas range yer had. So long.—Philadelphia Press.

"That boy of Smith's, just home from college, is a wonder."
"In what way?"
"Somebody asked him the other day about the easiest and quickest way of settling the pressing problems of the time, and he said he didn't know."—Baltimore American.

Hostess' Daughter (trying desperately to keep the conversation going)—Did you ever see the joke about the curio dealer who had two skulls of Columbus, one when he was a boy and the other when he was a man? Fitznoodle—No. I don't think I have. What is it?—Stray Stories.

Mrs. Gray—You say Mrs. Greene disagreed with everything I said? Just like her! She never is on the right side of any question. Mrs. Brown—You misunderstood me. I said she agreed with everything you said. Mrs. Gray—H'm! That's a way she has of currying favor.—Boston Transcript.

"When I was a young man," said the hardened old cynic, "I used to be afraid that I was not brilliant enough to become famous."
"And now?" asked a listener.
"Now," he replied, "I have decided that I am not stupid enough."—New
