No Fun For Boys.

In some of the cantons of Switzerland they have special laws made for boys. Here is a sample of them:

"If a boy throws a stone and hits a man he may be fined 3 francs.

"If a boy throws a snowball and hits a woman he may be fined 2 francs.

"If a boy calls a girl a 'red head' he may be fined from 2 to 4 francs.

"If a boy throws at frogs in a pond without being ordered to do so by his father or teacher he shall be fined a franc.

"If a boy throws a stone and breaks a window belonging to some one else his father may whip him or he may be fined 2 francs.

"If a boy makes a face at his teacher or draws pictures of him on his slate or speaks ill of him he may be fined 5 francs and have to beg his pardon.

"If a boy stones a dog or chases a cat it is a fine of a franc.

"If two boys fight without the consent of their teacher it is a fine of 3 francs.

"If a boy steals apples or other fruit it is a fine of 2 francs, and he should be beaten by his father."

The American boy who reads the above will wonder what the Swiss boy has to live for. About all he can do and not be fined is to have the measles or whooping cough.—Exchange.

Man's Unwisdom.

The simplest and plainest laws of health are outraged every hour of the day by the average man. Did Adam smoke? Did Eve wear cosmetics? Did Solomon chew tobacco? Did Ruth chew gum? Did the children of Israel make for a beer garden after crossing the Red sea? Did Rebecca eat gumdrops and ice cream and call for soda water? Adam was the first and was made perfect from head to heel. How long would he remain so after eating a mince pie before going to bed? Suppose he had slept in a bedroom five by seven, with the windows down, the door shut and two dogs under the bed? Suppose Eve had laced herself up in a corset, put on tight shoes, sat up all hours of the night eating her fill of trash and sizzled her hair. When you come to look at the way a man misbehaves himself you can only wonder he ever lived to get there. Verily, the average man behaves as if he were little better than a fool.—Woodbury (Conn.) Reporter.

"Do you believe that the good die young?" "I think they do, if all my wife tells me about her first husband is true."—Pick-Me-Up.

Where crocodiles abound in Africa native children are taught in case of an attack to gouge out the animal's eyes. Many save their lives that way.

Hourglasses in a London Church.

Nearly everybody is aware that at one time it was the custom in many churches to regulate the length of the sermon by an hourglass, which stood on the pulpit immediately fronting the preacher. Quite a number of these curious relics are preserved in various ecclesiastical edifices throughout the land, but the British and Foreign Sailors' church, situated in what was formerly Ratcliff highway, is the only one possessing four. They are in perfect preservation and are fixed all together in a framework of solid brass.—London Standard.

Happy Outlook.

They had had their fortunes told by scientific palmistry separately lest their marriage should be suspected and were comparing notes.

"There was only one thing I didn't like," said Angelina, "and that was that—that I was to be married twice."

"What!" Edwin exclaimed.

"It wasn't my fault," pleaded Angelina. "She said it was written in my hand."

"That you were to be married twice?"

"Yes."

"But I'm to be married twice too."

"The Oaks."

"The Oaks," which gave the name to the popular race, has representation in British drama in the play "The Maid of the Oaks," which was written by General Burgoyne, and after being performed at the author's residence on the Downs was produced by Garrick at Drury Lane in 1775. Burgoyne sold "The Oaks" estate to the sport loving twelfth Earl of Derby, who instituted the Oaks stakes in 1779 and was also the winner. The "Derby" was instituted in the year following. Out of consideration of the fillies taking part in both races the "Derby," which used to be run on the Thursday, was altered in later times to Wednesday to allow a day between the two great events.—Westminster Gazette.

Flags in Battle.

The evolution of the battleflag was a gradual process, and evidence of its first use in warfare is neither definite nor decisive. Its germ was contained in the numerous and varied standards and ensigns used by the ancient Egyptians, the Assyrians and the Chaldeans, from whose wooden or metallic images of favorite deities the modern battleflag has been elaborated. Naval flags were carried in the sterns of Greek battleships as far back as 500 B. C. Probably the linen tunic hoisted by Antigonus as a signal for his Illyrian troops to begin the attack at Sebasia and the waving of his red cloak to start a cavalry charge were the first demonstrations of the usefulness of flags on the battlefield.
