VALUABLE FEED.

Kale is chiefly valuable as a green feed for hogs, cows or poultry through the winter from November or October to April. The better types of plants endure the Willamette Valley winter weather without injury, yielding from 30 to 40 tons of succulent and nutritious green feed per acre under favorable conditions. It may also be grown for summer green feed, although less successfully.

For transplanting the seed should be sown in drill rows about three feet apart, as early in March as it is possible to get on the ground. If possible a strip of the best drained ground on the farm should be used for growing the young plants, and this should be manured and plowed in the fall so that it need only be replowed and worked down at once for the seed in the spring, thus getting the plants started as early as possible. One pound of seed will furnish enough plants for an acre.

Transplanting should be done about June 1st, if possible, when the plants are 6 to 12 inches high. Later transplanting is liable to be held back by the dry weather so much as not to be ready for cutting in early fall. With the ground in fine tilth, transplanting of small acreages may be done rapidly by hand with a long bladed spade, care being taken not to injure the roots in taking them up from the drill row, and replacing them in the new ground. They should be placed three feet apart each way, covered a little deeper than in the drill row, the soil firmed around them with the foot and later when wilted down, the whole field should be rolled. Plants should be left every three feet in the original drill rows and all extra plants saved for replacing those that may not survive transplanting.

Transplanting of larger acreages may be done by plowing and placing the plants three feet apart in every third furrow, covering the roots but not the leaves, with the next furrow turned and following the day's work with a roller. Missing plants may be replaced later by hand.

Instead of transplanting the seed may be dropped in hills three feet apart each way, several seeds to the hill, as early as the ground can be thoroughly prepared. Later each hill should be thinned, leaving one vigorous plant. As a rule this method does not give as good yields as transplanting.

After transplanting or thinning the field should receive frequent shallow cultivation to conserve the moisture until the plants branch out so far as to prevent further tillage.

In October or November after the green corn has all been fed, the kale, although not fully grown, will be ready for feeding. The plants should be cut off at the ground with an axe or shab, and the entire plant tossed on to the wagon or sled and hauled to the feeding place. Enough may be cut at one time for one or several days' feeding. Frozen kale should be allowed to thaw out before feeding. Where it is thought the older plants may taint the milk they should be fed immediately after milking. 40 pounds of kale per day with 20 pounds of good hay, such as vetch and oats, fed in two portions, makes an ideal ration for milk cows, very little or no mill feed being needed. The kale may be fed as needed clear through the winter until April or later. For summer feeding seed may be fall sown and transplanted early in the spring, being ready, under favorable conditions, for cutting during July, August and September. Unless the ground could be irrigated, however, once or twice the yields are not so heavy at this season.

GOOD NEWS FROM EVERYWHERE

Cities and Towns of Oregon Make Gratifying Reports.

Portland, Ore., March 22, 1909. Corvallis beat all records for enthusiasm when she inaugurated her progressive movement on St. Patrick's Day with two bands playing, hundred of school children marching, flags flying, banners waving, every place of business closed, and a genuine old-time Fourth of July sentiment prevailing everywhere. On the lapel of every coat there was a tag bearing the message, "Be a Booster," while delivery wagons carried the same message in box-car letters. There was a card in every window and when the subscription paper was opened two banks led with $360 each and in a few minutes $3600 was subscribed and this means not less than a six thousand dollar fund.

Mr. John T. Burns, secretary-treasurer of the Dry Farming Congress, which will hold its fourth session in Billings, Montana, is making a tour of Oregon and delivered an address today to the business men of Portland at the Commercial Club.

Milton and Freewater are going some in an advertising way. They have raised a total sum of $2580 for this purpose, Milton $1680 and Freewater $900. When they started out they hoped to be able to raise $1500.

The executive committee of the Albany Commercial Club have determined to continue their advertising and when one visits that city, which is now active and growing in the daytime and illuminated at night with hundreds in incandescent lights, it is easy to realize that advertising is a good investment.

C. T. Colt, late of La Grande, is active as advertising director of the Roseburg Commercial Club.

A GREAT WATER FALL.

Larger than Niagara is the cataract of the Iguazu falls, almost at the intersection of the three frontiers of Paraguay, Brazil and the Argentine Republic. The river takes its name from a Spanish word meaning great waters. About 12 miles from its mouth the bed drops suddenly down a rocky perpendicular cliff some 213 feet high, hence there is a waterfall of that great height. At this spot a delightful little island, beautiful with vegetation, divides the river into two arms so that the total width is about two miles and a half. The Brazilian arm of the river forms a tremendous horseshoe here and plunges into a great chasm with a deafening roar, while the arm on the Argentine side spreads out in a sort of an amphitheater form and finishes with one grand leap a little over 229 feet.

Below the island the two arms unite and flow on into the Parana River. From the Brazilian bank the spectator, at a height of 280 feet, gazes out over two and a half miles of some of the wildest and most fantastic water scenery he can ever hope to see. Waters steam, seethe, leap, bound, froth and foam, "throwing the sweat of their agony high in the air and writhing, twisting, moaning and screaming, bear off to the Parana."

When a high wind is blowing the roar of the cataract can be heard nearly 20 miles away. A rough estimate of the horse-power represented by the falls is 14,000,000.

Few sightseers ever catch a sight of the great Iguazu falls, because it takes six days to make the picturesque journey of about 1200 miles from Buenos Ayres.

Plant life seldom thrives under ash or yew trees.

YONNA ITEMS.

Word was received here Monday from Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Bowne. They left New York City on March 17 for Sheldon, Iowa, Mr. Bowne's old home. After a short rest there, they start for Klamath Falls, coming by way of Portland.

The Klamath Falls Chamber of Commerce is planning for a big time at the regular quarterly meeting on April 1st, at which time they will discuss the matter of a road to Lakeview, and also of a celebration for railroad day and an exhibit at the Alaska-Yukon Exposition. The County Judge and prominent business men of Lakeview will be invited to attend.

John Schallock, while absent on his recent trip, went to Vancouver to visit his son, Mark Schallock, who is a member of the Hospital Corps in the regular army. Mark was confined to the hospital for several months as the result of blood poisoning in one of his hands. He is now recovering but has not regained the use of his hand and it may be several weeks before it can be determined whether his recovery will be permanent.

LAKE COUNTY WOOL SALES.

Joe Fuller has stepped into the market to buy wool. Last week he purchased Manuel Sanders' entire clip, amounting to probably 50,000 pounds. Mr. Sanders is the first sheep man in Lake County to sell his wool this season and Manuel's financial condition is such that he is not obliged to sell unless he gets his price. We understand that Mr. Sanders received somewhere between 16 and 16 1/2 cents. Mr. Fuller is looking for more wool.—Herald.
