PROVES GREATNESS OF LOCAL INDUSTRY

Prof. Jas. Dryden, of U. S. Office Extension Service without charge.

OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, Corvallis, Or., May 4.—

Professor James Dryden, head of the department of poultry husbandry, has just issued his first bulletin to "Breeders of Chickens." It is a small eight-page pamphlet in the form of a reading lesson, and contains questions and blanks for answering for those that care to take up the course. As something of interest and instruction to poultry breeders, it has never had an equal in this state.

Professor Dryden first shows what a wonderful industry the poultry business is, then takes up the different sides of actual poultry raising. He says: "The money value of the wheat crop in the United States last year was less than the products of the hens. These products—poultry and eggs—were estimated by Government officials as worth over $600,000,000 in 1908. The poultry products of Oregon last year were worth enough to pay all the appropriations made by the last Legislature for two years."

He then takes up the classes of poultry, and shows which is the best for egg breeding, for meat breeding, general purposes, etc.; shows which is the most profitable varieties of breeds and some general advice as to the selecting of chickens.

The bulletin is gotten out through the department of college extension, and anyone wishing to enroll in the course may do so free of charge by sending in their name at once.

HOLGATE ON HOGS.

Raising hogs for market is one of the greatest of the coming industries for Klamath county. Although hardly enough pork is raised here to supply the local trade, yet it is easy to secure plenty of evidence that there is a large profit in the industry. More farmers each year are going into the business, even in this county, and it will soon be that no farmer can afford to not keep at least ten or twenty hogs.

Don Holgate, who is in the city from Merrill, states that they raised from 150 to 200 hogs last year, and are planning to increase the number this year, as he believes that they are one of the biggest money makers in the country. "Hog raising and the dairy business will be the two great industries of this country," said Mr. Holgate. "Klamath county could supply the entire coast with pork, and I look to see a packing plant established in this valley just as soon as the farmers wake up to the easy money to be made by raising hogs. The pork raised in this county is superior to much of that grown in the corn States of the Middle West. This is due to the favorable weather conditions, the cool nights in the summer, and the excellent feed that can be grown. The field pea has not been grown very much yet, but it will be used quite extensively in the future.

"It cost us last year on an average of 2 1/2 cents a pound to raise and feed our hogs until they were nine months old. We fed alfalfa, mill feed and barley. This was figuring the full cost and allowing interest on the value of the land at $50 an acre. An acre of alfalfa will feed ten hogs. It is easy for anyone to figure the profit on raising hogs. Ours cost 2 1/2 cents a pound, and in carload shipments the freight to San Francisco would be about 1 1/4 c. The market price in the city is from five to seven cents, so that even if one bought their grain they could clear from $60 to $75 an acre on the land used."

ASK LAW AGAINST LIFTING OF SKIRTS

Los Angeles, Cal., May 4.—George Alexander, Los Angeles' reform Mayor, and the city council are considering the passing of an ordinance limiting the height to which women may raise their skirts above their shootops on the streets. While the city officials have made no definite statement regarding the moral turpitude of stocking displays, they are agreed that the complaint of J. W. French of 401 South Hope street, who brought the matter to their attention, is worthy of serious consideration. French's letter to the Mayor, which first called his attention to the subject, was as follows:

"There ought to be an ordinance prohibiting women from lifting their skirts higher than 12 inches. Some Eastern cities have such an ordinance. I have often seen women crossing Broadway, in front of the City Hall, who take pride in showing that there are no holes in their stockings and that their garments match their suits. It is bad for the morals of the men, and the old men cannot help rubbering.

ADVISOR OF SEATTLE.

Seattle, May 4.—"It is the most successful world's fair in history, and the success is due to the fact that it is held on the grounds of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition.

"Sight-seeing" made the entire tour of the grounds in an automobile over asphalt-paved streets, and the big exhibit paces and natural beauties surrounding the fair brought forth many exclamations of surprise and pleasure from this veteran of two wars, who so successfully brought the Atlantic fleet from the Atlantic to the Pacific on its world tour.

As a naval officer, Admiral Evans has traveled extensively and has visited all of the great expositions in recent years, but in his opinion the Seattle fair sets the pace for future expositions of an international character.

Admiral Evans visited the exposition in March, two and a half months before the official date of the opening—June 1 of this year. He found the grounds in excellent condition. Flowers were in blossom, trees and shrubs had been set out in every nook and corner, thousands of rhododendron and cactus dahlia plants and been banked against the buildings, and the streets and walks paved.

All of the larger buildings were completed, and the United States Government structures nearly so. Permanent fire-proof buildings at the exposition to revert to the University of Washington were ready to receive exhibits, and there was the air of completeness everywhere. The Oregon, Washington, California and Washington buildings were inspected by Admiral Evans, as were the Manufacturers, Agricultural, Mines, Fisheries, Foreign, Oriental, Forestry, Auditorium, Fine Arts and other of the larger exhibit palaces.

A BIG BEAR STORY.

Col. Allison is an enthusiastic booster, but sometimes he lets his imagination run away with him, as is evident by the following bear story in the Portland Journal:

"M. L. Allison, a well-known Portland real estate broker, who has just returned from a trip to Klamath Falls, Or., brings the news that when the new Southern Pacific line into that place is completed, about May 6, there will spring up a city of amazing proportions.

"For 20 years the people of Klamath Falls and its vicinity have been doing their utmost to secure a railroad line, and now that such is nearly completed, business has received unusual impetus. A great many land deals of large magnitude are being consummated daily, according to Mr. Allison, and so fast are new settlers coming in that it is impossible for them to get accommodation. Many are living in tents, and one section resembles a tent city.

"Trains will be running into Klamath Falls by May 6," declared Mr. Allison, "and as soon as the railroad officials select a day for opening the line, one of the largest and most unique barbecues in the history of the West will be held. Everyone from everywhere will be invited to attend. A band of cowboys has been at work for some time trying to roundup a number of live bears. They plan to drive them into town, hold a bear dance, then kill them and serve bear meat at the feast. There will also be other novel entertainments."

PARDON SOUGHT FOR HENRY MELDRUM

WASHINGTON, May 4.—Application has been made for a pardon for Henry Meldrum, whose term of imprisonment for land frauds is about to expire. The pardon is sought to restore Meldrum's citizenship.

Henry Meldrum, ex-United States Surveyor-General for Oregon, is now serving a sentence at McNeill's Island. He was convicted by F. J. Heney during the land fraud trials. Meldrum was brought to Portland to testify in the John H. Hall case regarding George C. Brownell, a witness, but was not permitted on the stand. Efforts have been made for some time past to secure the pardon of Meldrum by his wife and relatives. Meldrum was convicted for fraudulent surveys.
