A. N. W.'s ENTERTAINED.

On Saturday evening Mrs. C. V. S. Cogswell, assisted by a committee of the following ladies, Mesdames C. C. Logue, R. H. Dunbar, Harry Caden, W. E. Faught and G. W. White entertained the A. N. W. Club and their husbands and about twenty invited guests at the home of Prof. W. E. Faught with a visit to the A. Y. P. exposition. The guests assembled at the home of Mrs. Cogswell as the first station of the railroad journey, from whence they were taken to Mr. Faught's in carriages provided by the committee. There, to their delighted astonishment, they found the house a veritable exposition in miniature. A well appointed "Creche" in charge of a competent matron near the entrance, where mothers might leave their babies in perfect security, and a booth where viands and bundles might be checked, was the first attraction, and spoke well for the committee in providing these comforts for their guests. A little farther on was the "Alaskan Building," where many baskets, totem poles and other Indian relics were to be seen. One of the ladies had this building in charge, and with her explanation of these designs and symbols on the paddles, baskets and totem poles made this one of the most interesting places of the fair. Here, also, was the great sealing industry of Alaska on exhibition, which consisted of a letter sealing outfit, seal-skin moccasins and other modern appliances necessary to sealing.

Farther on was the "Hall of Fame," wherein was shown the earliest photograph of each of those present, with a brief complete biographical sketch which was at once humorous and fitting. This proved one of the greatest attractions of the exposition.

On the other side of the "Court of Honor" was the Educational building, on one wall of which was hung specimens of the early endeavors in school work of each member and guest. Every exhibit in this department was well worth the close study and attention it received. There were drawings, compositions in both prose and poetry, work from kindergarten to university work—in fact, all grades were well represented in this artistic display.

Adjoining this building was the "Palace of Fine Arts," where the works of the great masters were displayed. These were kindly loaned the management by friends.

Another interesting place was the "Hall of Varied Industry," where practical demonstrations of the various industries were in actual progress.

Many of the visitors declared that there was more "class" on the "Pay Streak" than on the "Midway," "Pike" or "The Trail." Prominent among the attractions were the scenic railway, wild animal show, house upside down, old mill and Japanese village. The latter occupied a large space and was appropriately and beautifully decorated, and the Misses Faye Hogue, Nellie Cogswell and Ruth White made charming Jap maidens in native costume, and the visitor could almost imagine himself in the Flowery Kingdom as he entered and was greeted with "smiles of surpassing width and bows of ceremonial profundity," and sipped the delicious tea served with the usual rice cakes.

As this was supposed to be Klamath Day at the Fair, the clubroom of the Oregon building was presided over by the Klamath county hostess, Mrs. Cogswell. Here the visitors, after registering from their various States, were deftly served by four sweet little Klamath county girls with Klamath county butter and honey on delicious hot biscuits. Klamath county products were conspicuously displayed in this room, and a souvenir of Klamath county's most famous features was given each guest.

During this reception all were entertained by Prof. Wirtz with selections on the piano. Official guide books had been distributed at the beginning of the trip and these, with the unique souvenir, will keep in memory a most delightful evening.

NEW BAPTIST MINISTER.

Rev. Mead M. Bledsoe of Portland has accepted a call to the First Baptist Church of Klamath Falls. Rev. Bledsoe was pastor of Calvary Baptist Church in Portland for five years and state field missionary of Oregon for two years. He will remove to Klamath Falls about July 1st and immediately take up his work here. Mr. Bledsoe is said to be a man of ability and just such a man as Klamath Falls needs.

DAMAGE NOT VERY HEAVY.

Superintendent W. F. Arant returned last Friday from Crater Lake, where he went to investigate the damage done to the buildings by the heavy snow during the winter. He stated that the damage was not as bad as reported, although many of the buildings were destroyed. The large barn, which was built of heavy timbers and constructed with the belief that it would withstand any amount of weight of snow, was completely crushed to a level with the snow, about ten feet from the ground. The heavy timbers were simply broken up into kindling wood.

The only damage suffered by the residence was the roof, which was crushed in, but Mr. Arant states that this can be repaired at a small cost. Practically no harm was done to the furniture which was stored in the house.

Will G. Steel's buildings, which were near the Arant camp, were not damaged. Mr. Arant stated that there is still over eight feet of snow at the camp and that during Sunday night six inches of snow fell. It is still very cold near the lake.

A PROMISING POULTRY RANCH.

Mrs. Hattie Wilson was in from her timber homestead, about six miles north of town on Saturday. She says they are making a dairy and poultry ranch of their homestead. They have purchased a cream separator and are bringing the cream from eight cows to the new creamery.

Mrs. Wilson is using an incubator this year and now has 185 chicks hatched, with eggs enough left for another setting, which will run up the number at least 335. She is partial to the Leghorn breed of chickens, as they are good egg producers and with the price of eggs at 25c a dozen, pay better than raising chickens for market. She expects to have 200 laying hens next year; and they will milk about ten cows. It is her opinion that if the present prices of eggs and butter fat continue, they will be able to make a living without cutting a tree for wood for the market.

THE 320 HOMESTEAD.

There has been many inquiries in regard to the lands thrown open for settlement, a notice of which was published a few days ago in the Republican. A communication from the Lakeview Land Office states that these lands have been designated by Secretary Ballinger as subject to entry under the act of February 19, 1909, known as the 320-acre homestead law. It should be understood that aside from the lands designated some other are subject to entry, and parties making application to enter other lands under the act will gain no rights whatsoever. The lands in the Lakeview district are located in the townships from 25 to 41, and the ranges run from 41 to 24. A complete list of the lands can be seen at the Republican office.

STERNER BOUND OVER TO SUPERIOR COURT.

Lewis Sterner, the man accused of the killing of Pete Maslin near Dorris, has been held to the Superior Court and his bail fixed at $10,000. Coroner Kuch held his inquest Saturday and the jury's verdict was that Maslin died from the effects of a blow from a club in the hands of Lewis Sterner. Sterner was arraigned in Justice Burns' court Tuesday afternoon for a preliminary hearing. District Attorney Charles Luttrell conducted the examination for the State and Attorney Marcus Purcell acted for the defense, assisted by Rev. Shaw. James Beard was here from Yreka and transcribed the evidence.

LANDMARK GONE.

Work was begun Saturday on another of the old landmarks of the city. The big Lombardi poplar which has occupied a prominent place on the Hamaker property on Main street is being cut down. This tree was planted over twenty-five years ago by Judge Hale. Judge Hale has long since removed from Klamath Falls and now resides at Grants Pass, but the tree has stood as a monument and has miraculously escaped destruction where other trees and landmarks have been razed to the ground to be replaced by modern store buildings in the continual growth of the city. But at last the poplar's time has come, and before long the spot will be marked by a modern brick or stone structure.
