PROFIT IN KLAMATH FARMING.

The production from farms irrigated by the projects of the U. S. Reclamation Service is now being recorded by the Government. In most instances the land is being farmed by men ignorant of irrigation farming and often by men who know but little of any kind of agriculture, so that necessarily the production figures are not as great as may be expected when both men and machinery become more experienced. However, some of the figures published in the Reclamation Record show excellent results. For instance, on a 108-acre farm in the Klamath Project, California-Oregon, planted in alfalfa, barley, oats, hay and pasture, there was a total estimated yield of $3002, not counting the stock and poultry. Estimating the cost of production at $19 per acre, this leaves a net return of $17.80 per acre, or $1922. In Montana, on the Huntley Project, the average yield of sugar beets has been about 15 tons per acre, and these beets have been worth $5 per ton on board cars at the nearby railroad station. In the same country, yields of 30 bushels of wheat per acre and 60 bushels of oats have been secured. On the North Platte Project, Nebraska-Wyoming, one farmer reports 578 bushels of potatoes per acre on 1 1/2 acres, and 40 bushels of oats per acre. In New Mexico, the Carlbad Project, 23 tons of alfalfa were grown on 5 acres, with 2.2-acre-ft. of water per acre. In South Dakota, the Belle-Fourche Project, one man reports the following production per acre: 75 bushels of oats, 45 bushels of corn and 200 bushels of potatoes per acre on 4 acres. Another farmer in the same country raised 360 bushels of potatoes per acre. The average yield on about 3000 acres in this project are given as follows:

Oats, 2080 acres, average yield, 42 bushels per acre, average gross 600 acres, 20 bushels per acre, $18; native hay, 320 acres, 1 ton per acre, $9; potatoes, 80 acres, 90 bushels per acre, $54; alfalfa, 40 acres, 4.5 tons per acre, $18; barley, 40 acres, 25 bushels per acre, $13.75; rye, 40 acres, 15 bushels per acre, value per acre, $21; corn, 800 acres, 16 bushels per acre, $9.60; wheat, $10.50; garden produce, 10 acres, average gross value, $100 per acre. In addition to the crops named, there were some excellent gardens and water melon patches.

All of the farmers agree that considerable capital is needed for the successful prosecution of the work, and that as time goes on the yields will be increased.

Strange, isn't it, how much of Col. Roosevelt's shooting is done on Sunday? This, together with the fact that Kormit took 6000 cigarettes to give to the natives of Africa, should call for several resolutions in coming church conventions.

The Human Body.

Each ear has four bones.

The lower limbs contain thirty bones each.

The human body contains over 2,000 miles of tubing.

In three faces out of five the eyes are out of alignment.

The bones of an average male skeleton weigh twenty pounds, while those of a female are about six pounds lighter.

PERFECT FLIERS.

Eagles, Vultures and Similar Birds Are in This Class.

It is a fact that those ingenious and daring minds that devote themselves to the solution of the problem of aviation have given no small part of their preliminary study to considering the manner of flight of birds.

A strange result of this investigation is the conclusion, now generally indorsed, that, as a whole, the bird world is not to be regarded as perfect in its attainment of flight. For instance, it is contended by the best authorities that all birds obliged continually to flap their wings—and in this category may be mentioned sparrows, finches, thrushes, crows, etc.—are still in an imperfect stage of advancement.

In the next class, as being a degree advanced, are put such birds as pigeons, swallows, etc., which are able to dart ahead for a space after they have gained a good start by the vigorous flapping of their pinions.

In the third class the birds that may be said to be perfect fliers are the eagles, vultures, albatrosses and similar big birds possessing the ability to rise and fall and swoop and soar in the air indefinitely without a perceptible movement of their wings. It is, of course, known to every person of an observant turn that these big fowl are able to soar into the air gradually until at last they disappear from the eye of the watcher, it being almost impossible to detect any movement beyond a slight occasional motion of the tail.—New York Tribune.

A QUICK CHANGE.

From the Desire For Comfort to the Craze For Speed.

Mr. Newcar (about to start on his first trip in his recently purchased motor car, to his chauffeur)—Now, William, I want it thoroughly understood I will not have fast driving. Always keep well under the legal limit—not as close to it as you can. Ten miles an hour is fast enough for me. What I want is comfort, not excitement. Do you understand?

Three days later. "Er—er—William, I must be back to the house by 7 o'clock. This road seems very straight and wide. Don't you think you might go just a little faster without danger?"

Two days later. "William, this dust is very unpleasant. If you could pass that car ahead—it seems to be going rather slowly."

Next day. "Put on a little more speed, William. There's no use in being a crank. This road is too good to lose the chance."

A week later. "Open her up, William! There are no police within five miles, I'll bet, and if there are who cares? I'm out for fun! Let her zip! Let her zip! This is no steam roller! Let's have some speed!"—Life.

Monkey and Goat.

Monkeys are more renowned for mischief than for kindness, but even monkeys can be benevolent. M. Mouton records the doings of one in Guadeloupe that surely seemed to merit that reputation. This monkey had a friend in a goat that went daily to the pasture. Every night the monkey would pick out the burrs and thorns, sometimes to the number of 2,000 or 3,000, from the goat's fleece. In order that the animal might lie down in peace, the goat regularly went in search of his light handed friend and submitted himself to the operation. Strange to say, the tricky instincts of the monkey asserted themselves after the pricks were removed. He would tease the poor goat unmercifully, plucking his beard, poking him in the eyes and pulling out his hairs. The goat bore it all with patience, perhaps regarding it as only a fair price to be paid for the removal of the thorns.—London Standard.

The Ruling Passion.

His clothes said he was a tramp, but his brow was high and his manner grand. "Madam, may I request the favor of a pair of your husband's castoff trousers? These are somewhat passe." This, with a sweep of a tattered hat, brought results in the shape of a pair of hubby's oldest, which were just about two degrees better than those the tramp was wearing. After a critical survey of his acquisition, instead of the polite words of thanks the good woman was waiting for, the tramp volunteered, with a deep, long drawn sigh of regret, "Madam, I see your husband discards from weakness."—Puck.

Mission of Pain.

Although looked upon as an evil, pain is kind. It tells that the laws of nature have been violated and warns us to correct the cause. If it were not for pain we would go on doing things that would destroy us. Pain is a warning that something is wrong, and instead of trying to hush the pain with some drug we should seek to remove the cause.

In a Different Class.

"I hear, Mike, that your wife has gone into society. Has she become a clubwoman yet?" "Indeed she has not got into that class. She still uses a flatiron, sor."—New York Times.

It Would Make a Difference.

Teacher—Now, boys, here's a little example in mental arithmetic. How old would a person be who was born in 1875? Pupil—Please, teacher, was it a man or a woman?—Boston Transcript.
