

RAILROAD DAY WAS FITLY CELEBRATED
(Concluded from First Page.)

the snow-capped peaks, shimmering in the bright sun; I will take you down into the valleys and show the crystal springs and sparkling brooks, filled, as they are, with myriads of the gamest of fish—streams that wend their way to our great natural reservoir, there to add to the store of life-giving waters that are to make our valleys blossom as the rose. Come with me to that greatest of all great natural wonders and stand with me there on the shores of our beautiful Crater Lake; gaze down into its beautiful waters, sunken into old Mother Earth over two thousand feet, surrounded by crags of imperishable basalt, its waters tinted with the emerald blue, its border lined with the colors of the rainbow, and there behold a spectacle that is the most beautiful jewel that shines in the diadem of nature.

And so on, my friends, could I take you from place to place and point to point and show you treasures of nature that far surpass the best you have seen. But, as I said before, they have been waiting the magic touch to awake them from slumber. That touch has been given. Harriman, with his ribbons of steel and his iron horse has waved the magic wand that has joined us hand to hand. We now invite you to join us in the great struggle of future development. Stand with us shoulder to shoulder. Aid us in our effort to bring to your markets the products of our soil that we may aid you in sending to us the products of your brain. Klamath county extends to you a cordial welcome—a welcome that is as whole-souled and large as our broad valleys, our great lakes, our vast forests, and the enthusiasm that brings us together to-day.

The hour for the great parade having arrived, there was a hurrying of feet for points of vantage, and Main street from the offices of the Klamath Development Company to the bridge was lined with a solid mass of humanity. As the marshal of the day led the way, he was greeted with enthusiasm, and as each section passed along the street it was given a warm reception. It was a spectacle long to be remembered, marking, as it did, the end of the old and the beginning of the new. As the first sections passed in review it brought to the minds of the pioneers, recollections of the past and many were the eyes that were dimmed as the memory of the hardships of the early days were recalled.

The float of the Livermore Hotel, filled with a dozen of Klamath Falls' most beautiful young ladies in costumes and sitting on swings, attracted the most attention. Another float worthy of special mention was that of the Gun store. It showed a snow-capped mountain, at the base of which was a deer being devoured by a wildcat.

Three Thousand Enjoy Barbecue.
Twenty-one quarters of nice, tender Klamath county beef were barbecued last night and an order for six more was sent in so that there would be no chance of running short. It is estimated that there were fully three thousand people gathered at the barbecue grounds at noon to enjoy the great feast. Chairman Dolbeer of the Commissary and Ed McCornack, with their hundred assistants, were kept on the go every minute.

Lakeview Well Represented.
Lake county was well represented here to-day, as there are fully seventy-five of her citizens assisting Klamath Falls in her celebrating. Five automobile parties arrived from Lakeview Sunday, besides a large number of private teams and conveyances.

Everyone Accommodated.
Klamath Falls was able to accommodate her guests comfortably. The large delegation which arrived late Sunday was taken care of, and all sleeping accommodations were exhausted. The citizens very loyally turned over their homes to the strangers and everyone was cared for. The hotels and public rooming houses were full long ahead of the day of celebration, and were it not for the citizens there would have been many to go without beds, but that was where Klamath Falls showed the right spirit.

Chamber of Commerce, we salute you! That is the sentiment of the people of the city, produced by the remarkable success that crowned the efforts of this organization in carrying out the program of the Railroad Day. Many celebrations have been held here in the past, but nothing has ever approached that of Railroad Day. The crowning feature of the day was the water carnival at night and it was a fitting climax to a day filled with pleasure and punctuality from start to finish.

"We have at last found something that is going to make this city famous," said one of the leading citizens of the town today. "The various cities of the coast have their particular celebrations each year, but it rests with Klamath Falls to have its water carnival and out rival all of the entertainments on the coast each year. Could anything have been more beautiful than the spectacle witnessed last evening? And yet it was insignificant to what it can be in the future. The blending of the lights, maneuvering of the launches, the decorations on the barges, all added to the beauty and brilliancy of the occasion and set a model on which future events of this character may be patterned." The truth of these remarks is made more forcible when it is considered the great variety of designs that may be carried out. Flags, animals, the different celebrities—all of these and more—may be constructed and illuminated by the simple designs in lanterns. The lake could be strung with small electric lights encased in the lanterns of the designs and would form a spectacle that would be the most gorgeous thing imaginable. To the Chamber of Commerce must for all time remain the credit for the inauguration of this new idea of entertainment, and the best compliment that can be paid this organization is for the business men to insist that future events are conducted under its auspices.

The best evidence as to the worth or success of any one thing must come from a man who has had experience with the particular subject in hand, and on the question of the barbecue the remarks of William Pitts can be quoted without further comment:

"For many years I have attended barbecues in the South—the home of the barbecue. I have been to large ones and small ones, good ones and bad ones, but I had to wait until I came to Klamath Falls before I attended one that was a success in every particular. Nothing was overlooked, and the comfort of every man, woman and child was attended to with a care and fidelity that bespoke careful preparation and indefatigable labor. The committee in charge of this part of the program may well feel proud of the result of its labors."

Between 5,000 and 6,000 people were served, the bill of fare consisting of meat, beans, bread and coffee. Booths near at hand supplied for a small charge salads, cake and pies, tea cream and sherberts. There was an ample supply of everything, and when the entertainment was over the Indians were given what remained over, which represented a good supply. The meat was cooked to perfection, and many were the compliments passed on the coffee and beans. There was no crowding and no inconvenience and the service throughout was most excellent.

Of one thing the city may be proud—in addition to the success attending the celebration—that there is an organization here into whose hands future events of a similar nature may be entrusted with confidence. Doubtless such duties would be accepted with some reluctance, but it is believed that this can be overcome, especially in view of the fact that the people of this city thoroughly appreciate the work done, and will undoubtedly stand ready to finance anything of this character that the Chamber may see fit to handle.

Drastic laws to insure a safe and sane Fourth will not be half so effective as the wood shed interviews of our grandfathers' days.

Sort well your seed, but first be careful to select the right sort.

THE SULTAN KEPT HIS WORD.

After the French Ambassador Was His Guest He Sent the Gift He Had Promised.

The threshold of the harem has occasionally been crossed clandestinely, yet, save those in rare cases where a Turkish family, having adopted the conventions of the Europeans, admits its intimate friends, no stranger has openly and officially been permitted to visit the gynaeceum of the Turk, says N. C. Adossides in The Delineator for July. The one exception to this ironclad rule, strange to say, occurred in the palace of a sultan.

It was in the year 1807, when the British government, attempting to coerce the Sublime Porte into a coalition against Napoleon, ordered the Sultan, Selim III, to surrender his fleet. This Selim refused to do, and the English fleet sailed through the Dardanelles into the Propontis. Meanwhile, General Sebastiani, the French ambassador, assisted the Sultan in organizing the defense of Constantinople, and did it so admirably that the British fleet retired without firing a shot. Accordingly, the Padishah told him to choose his reward. The general, a thorough Frenchman, asked permission to visit his Majesty's harem.

Selim, bound by his word, granted this unprecedented favor, and invited him to witness the review of the sultanas. As the latter, the most beautiful women of the East, with blushing cheeks and modest eyes, passed one by one before them, the Sultan said: "Whoever of them all you find fairest is yours." Sebastiani, delighted, indicated one of the imperial odalisques, a Georgian of divine beauty, with deep black eyes.

The next morning a procession of black slaves appeared at the embassy, bringing with them a magnificent casket. Raising the lid thereof, Sebastiani beheld, lying upon a purple cushion, the head of the beautiful girl he had chosen. By its side lay a letter from the Khalifa, which read as follows:

"Though our law forbids that a woman of Islam be given to a Christian, yet thou shalt have at least the consolation that none other shall possess her whom thou hast preferred."

WHAT A COLLEGE GIRL CAN DO.

If She Lives in a Small Town She Can Exercise Wide Influence.

The college girl who lives in a small town has perhaps the greatest power for influence. Her education and experience raise her to a position which commands the respect of those others who had not had her advantages, and this position she should use, not as an excuse for egotism or self-sufficiency, but as a means of accomplishing reforms in the life of the community. Starting a village improvement society is an excellent way of interesting people in their surroundings, and opens to many an entirely new world, a world which teaches that the useful is not necessarily the ugly, and that environment is the inspiration of action. Beautifying the village or town is bound to bring the citizens together in a new and more intimate association, and does much to abolish those dens of vice which disgrace not only the aspect, but the moral life of a town.

Of course, this is but one phase of civic improvement; there are many others. In the factory town especially there is wide scope for the college-bred woman's activity. There is no reason why the factory town should be unsightly, or why the employees of the factory should live in ugly, unsanitary dwellings; no reason why the women of the town should not be roused to interest in their surroundings, and, above all, to self-respect.

The woman of education owes it to her less fortunate sister to encourage that feeling of self-respect which lies dormant in the breasts of so many factory women. Give them the vision of something broader and higher than is comprehended in their own horizon, and they will try to conform their lives to it. Give them model day nurseries and they will give their children cleaner homes. Awaken in them the consciousness that they have possibilities, and they will try to realize them.

TOO TRUE! TOO TRUE!

The baby was being questioned playfully as to his senses.
"What are these for?" touching his eyes.
"To see with," he answered.
"And this?" touching his nose.
"To smell with."
"And your mouth?"
"Oh, to eat."
"What are your ears for?"
This was a puzzle, but after a moment he said, with firm conviction, "To wash."

A TEMPORARY COVERING.

When Robert was only three, he found a discarded calendar and on it the bust picture of a woman with only a drapery thrown across her shoulders. He was looking at it very intently, and then said, "Keep your towel around you, girl! Your mama will come pretty soon with your clothes."

Do not bang the bits against the horse's teeth. Be patient and he will open his mouth.
