TACOMA COMES TO KLAMATH TO SECURE BEEF

The Completion of the Line to Natron Means That Klamath Will Be Large Beef Producer

The prediction often made that Klamath county is destined to be one of the main supply grounds for the stock markets of the Pacific Coast is emphasized by the appearance in the city of L. P. Pauley, representing the Castens Packing company of Tacoma. This company is one of the leading packing concerns on the Coast, and is constantly adding to its capacity, which now amounts to 150 head a day.

Mr. Pauley was here last year and purchased several train loads of cattle around Fort Klamath. These were driven to Ashland for shipment. This year they will be shipped from Midland, and the result is the leaving in this county a considerable amount of money that would otherwise be spent on the other side of the mountains.

"When this line is completed to Natron, Klamath county will at once take front rank among the cattle-producing sections of the Coast," said Mr. Pauley at the Lakeside to-day. "Few realize what this will mean to the farmers of this county. Heretofore it had only one market for its stock—that to the south. The building of this line will open up the northern market, and this one will be more important than the one south. The growth of the Northwest during the past few years has been phenomenal and with this increase has come the greater demand for meats of all kinds. This has grown to such an extent as to attract the attention of the great packing companies of the East and they are at work now erecting mammoth plants in Portland. It will be a difficult matter to supply the demand, and I firmly believe that there will be a substantial advance in the price paid for stock of all kinds.

Klamath county now has the lead in the stock industry and it is not likely that it is going to lose it. The opening up of the northern market means a greater demand for fattened stock and this means a greater demand for alfalfa. It is not a rash prediction to make that if all of the irrigated lands in Klamath were in alfalfa there will be demand sufficient to consume the entire supply."

Frequenter of the classic Battery Park at the southern end of Manhattan island were forcibly reminded of the palmy days of "America" cup racing, when they saw a gang of Park Department riggers hoisting into position a new flagpole, which turned out to be nothing more nor less than the mast of the old cup defender Constitution. The lower mast is built of steel and is, of course, hollow. Telescoping into this is the wooden topmast. The foot of the mast is bolted to a mass of concrete, and the truck of the topmast from which the flag flies is about 165 feet above the sea wall. In the rigging of the mast Herreshoff tried a new system of double cross-tees. Breakages of the mast were frequent, and he subsequently, in the Reliance, returned to the old system of single cross-tees.
