

CENSUS SCHEDULE CHANGES

Director Durand's Action on the One for Manufactures.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 19.—United States Census Director Durand announces two very material changes in the schedule for manufactures to be carried by the special agents employed in collecting the data for the thirteenth census.

"At the censuses of 1900 and 1905," stated the director, "the manufacture schedule called for the average number of men, the average number of women and the average number of children under 16, employed during each month in each establishment. Could this question have been answered accurately it would undoubtedly have furnished information of much value and of greater value than that which we are now proposing to secure. To answer this interrogatory with strict accuracy would, however, require the special agent or the manufacturer filling out the schedule to go in detail through every payroll of the year—usually either 52 or 26 in number—counting the number of men, women and children separately on each—the segregation of those under 16 years involving peculiar difficulty, particularly in the case of the earlier payrolls of the year—and averaging the count in each month. To do this would have required several times as long to fill out all the remainder of the manufacturers schedule except only the question on classified wages."

"As a matter of fact, practically none of the returns at the preceding censuses were based on actual analyses of the payrolls. They were in nearly all cases mere estimates made more or less offhand by the manufacturer or his bookkeepers, and there is every reason to believe that these estimates were often wide of the mark. The schedule as it has been revised for the present census calls for the number of men, women and children employed during one specific week only, and for the total number employed without distinction of age, or sex on the first payroll of each month. The relative extent to which women and children are employed will be ascertained approximately from the figures for the selected week and although that week will not perhaps in some industries be typical of the year as a whole, the accuracy of the figures will more than compensate for the apparent sacrifice in the amount of information obtained.

"We have also deemed it wise to cut out the question with regard to classified wages to which I have just referred, and which appeared in the census schedules of 1900 and 1905. These schedules called for the number of employees during a selected week, classified according to their earnings, and also separating men, women and children under 16. This interrogatory, if correctly answered, would furnish information of great value. We have become convinced, however, that for many establishments correct answers cannot be obtained by any amount of effort, and that for other establishments the amount of effort necessary to obtain answers would involve expense and delay precluded by the limitations of our appropriations and requirements as to the date of publishing the results. Strictly speaking, this inquiry falls within the field of the bureau of labor rather than that of the census bureau. It may be, however, that at another census, in order to take advantage of the fact that census agents are to visit every manufacturing establishment, we shall ask the authority of congress to provide a separate schedule covering classified wages and an extra appropriation to get it properly filled from actual payrolls. It would not be essential that statistics of classified wages be secured from every establishment. If such returns could be secured for even 50 per cent of the establishments they would be of great interest, and the agents should be specifically instructed to accept no estimates.

"The reason for these two changes in the manufacture schedule is found not only in the difficulty in answering the former inquiries properly, but in the fact that they tend to injure the accuracy of the replies to all the other interrogatories in the schedule. The schedule of manufactures hitherto has been overloaded. The special agents and manufacturers were practically forced in many cases to make estimates in replying to these two interrogatories, and this practice tempted them to regard estimates as sufficient also in replying to other interrogatories in the schedule. The intellectual integrity of the special agents was undermined by attempting to require of them work which they knew could not be done accurately within the time which they were allowed."

Several citizens are complaining because the light ordered for Sixth street on the Hill by the city council several weeks ago is not yet installed. It gets dark early now, and as the road is rough and steep up that way it is very inconvenient for those who live on the Hill.

The subjects are announced on the bulletin board in front of the courthouse. All services are evangelistic. The public will be made to feel at home at all times. Come.

TEACHERS' INSTITUTE

Arrangements have been completed by Superintendent Swan for the annual teachers' institute. The institute will be held at Klamath Falls November 1, 2 and 3. The day sessions will be held in the city school building and the evening sessions will be held in the high school building. The instructors chosen are Superintendent Ackerman, Prof. E. D. Ressler of the Oregon Agricultural college, formerly president of Monmouth normal, and Prof. L. R. Alderman of the University of Oregon. The outside instructors will be assisted by local teachers. The program prepared gives promise of a strong institute.

On Monday, November 1st, the school officers' convention will be held. Mr. Swan is sending out cards urging the school officers to attend. There is a provision for an allowance of $2 from the general fund for a representative from each district.

The schools of the county are now all supplied with teachers, and are running satisfactorily. There is good interest, and Klamath county need not be ashamed of her schools. It is a matter for pride that the county school exhibit took a medal at the Seattle Fair. When the heads of the schools and the county superintendent took the matter of an exhibit up, they felt that there should be something at the fair from the county, and inasmuch as there seemed to be no movement to have any other display, they decided to place a county school exhibit there. The display was collected rather hurriedly and was nothing out of the ordinary school work.
