NOTES FROM KENO

Last week the Klamath Falls Gun club, Bob Hunsaker, Henry Stout and six others whose names were not learned, came to Keno to kill ducks. They had a good time shooting—shot about 2,000 times, and scared the ducks on every side and killed all they wanted. However, there are a few ducks left for seed.

William Stone was in Keno last Sunday visiting old friends. He brought with him from his ranch a radish that measured twenty-six inches in circumference. It was solid, crisp and juicy. Mr. Stone's ranch is on the Klamath River, below Keno.

The late snow is good for the log haulers, and also for the wood men. H. L. Smith, the blind man, has 400 cords of dry wood on the bank of the river, and more coming.

What He Thought

The subject of conversation between the last two sportsmen left up at night in the smoking room after a hard day's shooting was the wonderful scent of dogs.

"Mine is a marvel. Not long ago I went motoring, far from home. My pointer, although chained up, worked himself out of his collar and found me two hours afterward. What d'ye think of that?"

"I think you both ought to have a bath."—Buffalo News.

STATE LAW PROVIDES A PENALTY

FAILURE TO FIX LICENSE DOES NOT GIVE RIGHT

Fine of Not Less Than $200 Nor More Than $400 Can Be Enforced Against Violators

In the writup of the council meeting Wednesday the Chronicle made a statement which, if followed by any one, may lead the individual into trouble. It reads "He who has a government license may sell liquor at will."

Any one who cares to follow such advice may do so, but he takes desperate chances if he does.

Yesterday the county court declared the liquor law voted on at the last election to be in force, and as a consequence liquor may be sold in this county when the proper authority is given.

In conversation with a Herald reporter today City Attorney Drake said:

"Klamath Falls has absolute control over the liquor traffic. The city council can regulate it as it sees fit, subject to the provisions of the city charter. What would be the condition in case the license is not fixed is a mooted question. The city has control over the traffic, but there is a general law applying to the counties which prescribes the conditions under which liquor can be sold in the county, and designates the penalty for failure to observe its provisions. It is a question that requires careful consideration and much investigation, and a person had better think twice before he attempts to follow such advice as that given in the article mentioned. A man outside the city who follows such advice would certainly get into trouble."

The general laws of the state provide that in order to secure a right to sell liquor in a county a license must first be granted by the county court upon payment of the license fee of $400. The method of securing the license is set forth, and it must be followed literally.

The county license for malt liquors only is $200.

The section of the general law providing the penalty for the sale of liquor without first obtaining a license is as follows:

"If any person or persons shall barter, sell or dispose of in any manner, any spirituous, malt or vinous liquors without having first obtained a license therefor as provided by this act, such person shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than $200 nor more than $400."

The question whether the recently enacted law allowing the cities absolutely to control the liquor traffic is merely a privilege of which they may avail themselves, or whether it takes away all subjection to the general law and makes a refuge for those who violate the provisions of the statute governing the sale of liquor in the county is a question that has not been decided. It seems the better view that the recently enacted law is a privilege of which the city may avail itself if it chooses, and which does not abrogate the penalty of the general law
