While it is true that a fragment from a bursting shell snipped off one of "Big Tom's" legs, he will soon be as good as new, for Secretary Meyer has ordered navy surgeons to prepare him a wooden leg which experts will bind to the wound. Aside from having his outer covering slightly ruffled, "Henry the Fifth" escaped injury.

EDITOR KOHLSAAT REPEATS CHARGE

Wholesale unofficial denials of Taft's relation to the case are coming from Washington. The committee may ask Aldrich and Penrose to testify.

H. H. Kohlsaas, publisher of the Chicago Record-Herald, thrice reiterated his assertion that big interests raised a hundred thousand dollars to elect Lorimer. When asked regarding the editorial his paper printed, asserting that a large Lorimer slush fund was raised to elect Lorimer, he said that he had good grounds for such assertion, adding the amount to the hundred thousand. ## WAR'S ABOLITION PRACTICAL--TAFT

EXECUTIVE CERTAIN IT IS NO IDLE DREAM

STEPS FOR TREATY WITH ENGLAND

Prize Court, He Says, Will Become Arbitration Court Sooner or Later

WASHINGTON, March 29.—The abolition of war is not the dream of theorists, but the practical plan which according to President Taft today, promises to mark one of the very greatest steps in the history of the world, through the medium of arbitration. The President has taken the lead in a recent movement of the nations looking toward the realization of a hope which found its inception in the year 1, A. D.

Through a special interview, granted by the President, the United Press today is able to present for the first time his views on this vast project. Under the unwritten law of the White House, the President is not directly quoted, but in the following article an earnest effort is made to reproduce his opinions as he expressed them.

Arbitration will surely come as the means of settling international disputes. Disarmament is incidental. It will follow as a matter of course and has no part in the present movement. The realization of arbitration will make armament useless and when it is useless it will disappear. The way to dispose of armament is to provide some means of settling international disputes without the use of armament. When that is accomplished it will be time enough to think of armaments.

The first step is the formation of an arbitration treaty with Great Britain. The favorable manner in which this suggestion has been received in England speaks well for its early accomplishment. The favorable endorsement in France is another indication that the time is ripe. When several big nations get together with such treaties, then the others will observe how the new system works and all will come in.

The matter will be taken up immediately. Secretary of State Knox and Ambassador Bryce probably will exchange ideas and the treaty will be worked out so that it may be submitted to the Senate at the earliest possible time compatible with careful preparation.

It is right that the United States should take the first step in this movement. The hearty response with which the plan has been received is an indication of this. While the exact details are as yet in a formative state, they will soon be worked out. The Arbitration Treaty must not be confused with an alliance. It distinctly is not an alliance. It is an agreement between two nations to settle disputes arising between them and will have no bearing whatever upon a dispute between one of the parties and a third power.

The present prize court is the first evidence of the general movement toward worldwide arbitration. The settlement of the Newfoundland fisheries dispute between the United States and England at The Hague was one of the most important evidences of present times. A dispute that had been standing for 100 years was settled and disposed of with the exception of certain details which are to be worked out by joint commission.

The Prize Court will be developed into an Arbitration Court and it will represent the modern method of dealing with international affairs. The immediate and, at present, the all-important step, however, is the accomplishment of an arbitration treaty with England. An effort will be made to have it ratified at the coming session of Congress. Then will come similar treaties with other nations as rapidly as circumstances permit.

With such treaties in effect between England, France and the United States, the great purpose would be near accomplishment, and the rest would come as a matter of course. It is an actual, practical proposition that promises realization.

FAIL IN THIRD ATTEMPT TO BURN ST. PAUL'S CHURCH

WALLA WALLA, March 29.—For the third time an attempt has been made to burn St. Paul's Episcopal church of this city, all three efforts proving futile, although the first two caused heavy damage.

The latest attempt was early last night when Chorister H. A. Casey interrupted the man at his work and gave the alarm. He escaped and the church was guarded last night by two Whitman college students.

The first attempt at burning the church was made November 17, 1910. Another fire occurred that night and suspicion fell on Nathan Hart, a plasterer, who was locked up on an arson charge. Hart was acquitted this month. Since then two more attempts have been made to burn the church but Hart has not been connected with either of them. Hart has served a prison term for arson.

Officers are working on good clues, they state, and $100 reward has been offered by the church authorities.

Revised reports show that eighteen were seriously injured, while eight others were cut by flying glass.

It is stated by a number of persons who were at the Southern Pacific depot that morning when the motor arrived from the south that the brakes were not working then, and that the motor ran past the depot. Among those who noticed this and remarked on it at the time was Prof. P. J. O'Gara, government entomologist, who later boarded the motor and was severely cut and bruised about the legs.
