

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

By MARGARET MASON

Monsieur Paul Poiret is here for to say That your style must be all to the Persian. So turbans acquire And a tunic on wire, And on trousers don't look with aversion.

(Written for the United Press)

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—Since Paul Poiret and his svelte better half are in our midst to show American beauties the gentle art of dressing, every fashion shop is giving subtle Persian afternoon's where langorous models parade in latest Oriental creations inspired by the great and only Poiret. Soft strains from Lisa Lohman's "The Persian Garden" fill the air. The lovely models fill the gowns, and the latter friend husband will be called upon to fill the bill when you've taken your pick of the wondrous creations.

For morning wear three lovely Poiret models were offered at a recent exhibition. First was a blue serge with long straight lines, the loose normal waist line belted in a girle of scarlet and gold embroidery taken from a Persian document. The girle was set up in a triangular piece on the front of the bodice and triangular patches of the embroidery brightened the long loose sleeves at the wrist line. The skirt was draped up slightly at one side with a patch of the embroidery and revealed the new knee-high boot of soft blue kid loose and wrinkling above the ankle.

Another tailored costume of tan cloth was inspired by the uniform of an ancient Tunisian warrior. It was made with a short Russian blouse elaborately braided in Oriental designs. A girlish model in rose duvetyne, which by the way is one of the newest of the many new and lovely materials, was of a blouse and tunic effect with touches of black.

Judging from the afternoon models offered you won't dare wear anything but velvet. Quite the most beautiful gown was of lustrous old blue panne velvet much draped as to skirt with all the fullness about the hips; the bodice was cut low and filled in with soft net and a band of mink outlining the shoulders and coming well down below the bust line on each side of the front.

A rich black velvet skirt topped with a bright scarlet tunic cut like the uniform of the warlike Cossacks was the Poiret offering for afternoon. The tunic was sleeveless. Bright red, blue, green and yellow barbaric embroidery of the trans-Caucasian regions outlined the armholes and lined the tunic. Long black velvet sleeves like the skirt contracted with the tunic. A soft draped model of olive green velvet has a three-quarter loose coat below which a wide ribbon of old blue showed draped from the girle in a long loop caught in at the front and the back of the draped skirt. A startling costume of black and white was in velvet with a wired tunic of black chiffon edged with brilliants. The low cut bodice was outlined with an upstanding wired frill with brilliant edging and the short transparent sleeves were finished with a row of them. The skirt was draped up in front between the knees, where a huge tassel of jet dangled on a twisted rope of jet from the girle, and clanked like a ball and chain at every foot step. Like wondrous visions from fairyland the evening gowns were paraded into view. The exquisite coloring and ravishing designs of the fabrics reeked of the splendors of the Orient and the romance of the Arabian nights.

A quaintly charming sartorial poem by Paul Poiret inspired the miniature of a young Princess of Bagdad showed a scant straight skirt of white satin slit up in front mounted with four little stiffly wired tunics of white chiffon rising in tiers to the short waisted black velvet bodice. The low round neck was outlined in a wired white chiffon frill, and the sleeves were mere black velvet caps. The headdress was a close-fitting casque of whole pearls. An adorable gown with a skirt of black satin and a tunic like the inverted calyx of a morning glory was another Poiret inspiration. The calyx-like tunic was of pale lavender satin lined with rose pink satin and embroidered in Persian flowers in delicate shades of lavender, pink and blue. The low cut black satin bodice had the flowered embroidery converted into short sleeves and draped softly over the bust.

In a soft shaded staged setting of a subtle Persian afternoon on slim sinuous models creations are indeed dreams of Persian poetry, but just show how they would look on the buxom American beauty as she trips down Fifth avenue or to the Ritz and the Vanderbilt o' evenings is hard to imagine.

Anyway, it is to be hoped that Mme. Poiret will take on a little more flesh, so that Monsieur, who uses her as his inspirations, may then perhaps turn some of his creative ability loose on some sartorial confections for fat ladies.

FALL OF HORSE

INJURES BRAIN

KENO, Oct. 16.—N. P. Spencer, a son of Tom Spencer, was injured by a fall with a horse at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, and is in a critical condition, the fall causing concussion of the brain. Dr. Merryman was summoned, and last night he removed Spencer to Klamath Falls.

It is believed that when the horse fell Spencer's head struck a rock. When the horse regained its feet and started, Spencer, unconscious, was dragged some distance, with one foot in a stirrup.

Although every effort has been made to revive the youth, Spencer, who was taken to the Blackburn hospital last night, is still unconscious.

Fearing that he may not survive the concussion, word has been sent to the young man's relatives. His mother is expected this evening from Ashland.

CELERY PATCH

IS SMALL MINT

What can be done on a couple of town lots has been shown by Messrs. Webber and Jensen, who are now marketing about 7,000 bunches of the finest celery ever shown in Klamath Falls. The celery was grown on portions of three lots in the city, and an exhibit made at the recent county fair easily took first prize, and was pronounced the best quality ever seen.

Webber & Jensen will realize about $500 from the sale of this crop, and there has been a great demand for this celery, as it is so far superior to anything shipped in from the outside. Undoubtedly the growing of celery in Klamath county is destined to become a great industry.

At the regular meeting of Prosperity Rebekah Lodge Thursday night the following members were named as the banquet committee for November: Mrs. Nellie Van Riper (chairman), Mrs. Henrietta Brookfield, Miss Vera Houston, Jay Manning, Mrs. Virginia Alford, W. R. Johnson, Mrs. Edna Elliott, J. W. Smith, Mrs. Marjorie Sellars, Mrs. Linnie Matthews, Mrs. Elizabeth Bice, Mrs. Kittie Tulle, Mrs. Greta Bradley, George Bradley, Mrs. Agnes Masten, Mrs. Stella Lipfert, Chas. Garcelon, Mrs. Effie Garcelon, Miss Restora French, Mrs. Elizabeth Fitch, Miss Pearl Talley.

The Klatawa Club dancing parties, which have been among the most enjoyable social features of the past two winters, are to be given again this winter, according to announcement made by the club members. Invitations will be sent out in a few days for the first two dances. These will be held Wednesday evening, October 29th, and Thanksgiving. As usual, the White Pelican hotel will be the scene of these parties, and the dining room will be used for the dancing, while the spacious lobby and the other parts of the splendid hostelry will be at the disposal of the guests. The Tindall orchestra will furnish dance music. The parties given by this club of well known young men have always proved delightful affairs, but this year, say those in charge of arrangements, the club will eclipse all previous efforts in providing for the entertainment of its guests.

Mrs. W. O. Smith was hostess to the Bridge Club on Saturday, entertaining with two tables of bridge. In attendance were Mrs. Edward J. Murray, Mrs. Don J. Zumwalt, Mrs. George Noland, Mrs. E. R. Reames, Mrs. Clarence H. Underwood, Mrs. R. M. Richardson, Mrs. Gibson and Miss Maud Baldwin.

Modoc Hall will be the scene of a dancing party Halloween, given by the ladies of Sacred Heart Church. A number of committees have been named to take charge of the different features of the work, and these are all industriously engaged in efforts to make the dance the greatest social and financial success of the year. The Tindall orchestra will furnish the music for the occasion. Tickets are to be sold in a few days by the ladies in charge of the work.

Mrs. Carl Allen Poe of Portland, who has been visiting her sisters, Mrs. Leslie Rogers and Mrs. Carl Cofer, left Monday morning for her home in the Rose City. Saturday evening Mrs. Cofer entertained in her honor, the guests being Miss Maud Baldwin, Mrs. Wesley O. Smith, Mrs. Clarence H. Underwood, Mrs. Will Baldwin, Mrs. Harry Benson, Mrs. J. Frank Adams, Mrs. Earl Whitlock, Mrs. Orb Campbell, Mrs. Leslie Rogers, Mrs. Charles I. Roberts and Mrs. Fred Stahlman. Five hundred was played during the evening, and Mrs. Whitlock made high score, receiving for this a dainty prize. During the course of the entertainment refreshments were served by Mrs. Cofer.

Monday evening was spent in a delightful manner at the home of Mrs. Orb Campbell, when she was hostess to a number of ladies. The evening was devoted to playing five hundred, and Mrs. Earl Whitlock was awarded the high score prize. The guests were Mrs. Burge Mason, Mrs. George H. Merryman, Miss Nina Noel, Mrs. Will Baldwin, Mrs. Zim Baldwin, Mrs. Harry Benson, Mrs. Earl Whitlock, Mrs. Thomas Hampton, Mrs. Carl Cofer, Mrs. Leslie Rogers, Mrs. J. Frank Adams, Mrs. Chas. I. Roberts, Miss Lois Myers and Miss Maud Baldwin. The tables were prettily decorated with sweet peas and asters. During the evening a light luncheon was enjoyed.

The Priscilla Club met Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Percy Sholl, and as usual, the members spent several pleasant hours, doing needle work and conversing with each other. Refreshments were served during the afternoon by Mrs. Sholl, and the guests were Mrs. Charles Graves, Mrs. R. J. Sheets, Mrs. Chas. House, Mrs. H. W. Keese, Mrs. Lizzie Fitch and Mrs. Fred Bremer.

Mrs. Thomas Hampton was hostess to the Friday Afternoon Club this week, and she entertained her guests at the Hotel Hall. Bridge was played, and Mrs. Meldrum won the prize. Dainty refreshments were served during the course of the afternoon, and there were in attendance Mrs. J. C. Brockenbrough, Mrs. F. B. English, Mrs. Gale, Mrs. Elbert B. Hall, Mrs. Mary A. Jackson, Mrs. Charles Meldrum, Mrs. Fred Schallack, Mrs. Silas Obenchain, Mrs. Earl Whitlock, Mrs. R. E. Smith and Mrs. Fred H. Mills.

CAN SHIP GAME

BY GETTING TAG

Any of the sportsmen who desire to ship game to their friends out of the city can now do so by procuring metal tags from Game Warden C. M. Ramsby. Mr. Ramsby has just received a supply of tags from the game and fish commission. These tags can be secured on the payment of five cents each.

The law provides that any game shipped outside of the state or to points within the state must be tagged. Application must be made to the game warden, who, if he is satisfied that the game was legally killed, will issue the party tags for five cents each.

In the shipment of ducks, each bird must be tagged. If a deer is shipped in quarters, each quarter must have a tag attached. In case, however, of the game being carried as baggage, the license tag attached is sufficient.
