

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

By MARGARET MASON

Beige gown is oyster white, And biscuit hued her coat, With touches of tomato red About the sleeves and throat. Her hat's of cafe au lait plush, Whence claret feathers float; She looks the latest style and sounds Just like a table d'hote.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Nowadays it is hard to tell from the conversation whether modists and dressmakers are talking about the French dressing on a salad or French dressing on a lady. Culinary art and sartorial art are indeed akin and a raspberry confection on a fashion plate is quite as delectable as one on a desert plate. There seems to be a perfect passion for all the light edible tones of oyster, biscuit, campagne, cafe au lait and cream for street costumes. Combined with dark fur they are truly stunning and a decided relief from the dark toned blue, brown and black street suits to which we have been so long addicted.

A lovely biscuit duvetyn trimmed in skunk has a four-inch band of skunk midway of the skirt to simulate a tunic and another four-inch band around the hem. A wide girde of old blue boire ribbon eight inches wide finishes in the back like a Japanese obi and gives a smart square effect to the figure.

The coat hangs in a loose sack below the shoulders in back to well below the hips. In front it is cut short almost to the bust and buttoned on the side with four square old blue buttons. The collar and cuffs of the sleeves are of skunk. A pale blue combined with fitch, and a delicate pink duvetyn with sealskin while not so gastronomically named certainly looks good enough to eat.

This craze for the delicate shades will no doubt bring joy to the dry cleaner's heart and much gold to his coffer. The vivid shades that the futurists brought forth have faded quite away and indeed only bright hue which has the sartorial sanction for smart street wear is red in every and any conceivable shade—cherry, beet, tomato, raspberry, strawberry and wine to suit your taste.

The last new use for fur was the ankle of fitch, ermine or sable, according to your furry fancy and now it has gone to the other extreme and appeared as a head band. Quite the chicest addition to the evening coiffure is a flat circlet of skunk wreathing the brow of the debutante or the matron. A soft crush of chiffon in any desired tone combined with it breaks the rather hard line of the fur against your head and helps distinguish your own hair from the hair of the defunct animal.

The round balls of fluffy ful-like buttons are charming additions to a three-piece cloth suit and quite the only trimming necessary, while the new pouch bags of velvet and plush are lovely for banded to match the costume of the carrier.

Beads in all the garish colors are used lavishly in quaint designs as trimmings on fur turbans. Done into dragons, birds, beasts and butterflies they also adorn the patrician silk clad ankles of many a haut monde turkey trotter.

If you want to be a vision of loveliness when your own particular tired business man comes home for a late dinner slip into one of the so adorable pink or blue crepe de chine negligees outlined in swansdown with cap and ribbon slippers edged in the same snowy fluff. Don't forget a fleeting glimpse of a lace edged crepe de chine petticoat also swansdown banded and he will be sure to forgive you for not dressing to dine. Nothing more temptingly fascinating than these swansdown trimmed sets have been seen in the white enameled cases of the shops where the negligees grow for a long time.

The robes themselves are cut all in one in a loose sack effect, each side crossing in front and fastening on the opposite side in a characteristic Paul Poiret manner.

To match up the stunning new silk knitted sweaters Oriental turbans are being shown from a fringed knitted scarf of silk in a bright hue to match the sweater and twisted around the head. They fasten on one side with a hook and eye and the fringe is allowed to fall coquetishly over one ear as a finish. When you see one you are sure to be all wrapped up in it very soon.

INDIAN BUREAU WANTS BIDS ON CATTLE FOR THE INDIANS

Klamath cattle men have a chance to bid on the supplying of cattle to the Hualapai Indians, for the Indian service has just issued a call for bids for livestock, to be distributed among the tribesmen. The cattle are to be delivered at Peach Springs, Arizona.

The call for bids, issued by Commissioner Sells, asks for 500 2-year-old Southern or Mexican heifers, full age July 1, 1914, subject to an increase or decrease of 10 per cent at the time of the award, and twenty bulls, ones or twos, full age July 1, 1914.

The bids will be opened Monday, February 26th, in Washington, D. C. Bidders are asked to send their proposals to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, marked "proposals for cattle."

Each bid must be accompanied by a certified check or draft upon some United States depository or national or state bank, payable to the Indian commissioner, for not less than 5 per cent of the amount of the bid. Further particulars will be given at the Herald office to any cattleman interested.

SPIRIT OF WEST TOLD BY SCHAFER

One of the most interesting numbers held in this city this winter was the lecture, "The American West and Democracy," by Dr. Schafer Saturday night. Dr. Schafer is head of the history department of the University of Oregon, and spoke here under the auspices of the University's extension department.

"The greatest thing about the West," said the speaker, "is that it offers an opportunity for the creating of a new manhood. A man must conform himself to frontier conditions or perish, and these new tests to the man, condition him for a new democracy, and in turn, through the man, their influence is felt in the nation. The West is a state of mind, rather than a geographical place."

Tomorrow evening Dr. Clifton Hodge, also of the extension department of the university, will speak here. His "Civic Biology" is making him known throughout the state.

SHIP DIFTING IN HELPLESSNESS

ASHFORD, Ore., Jan. 19.—A message received here by wireless at noon stated that the crew of the steam schooner Yellowstone was in imminent peril. The vessel has lost both the main and mizzen masts, her fuel is exhausted and her rudder lost, and she lies helpless eighteen miles off shore from Coos Bay.

The master of the vessel refused to take a tow line from the steamer Catania which vessel laid by all night waiting for daylight to give her assistance. It is presumed that the captain of the Yellowstone believed he could make port without aid, and thus save the salvage charges. The Catania then proceeded on her way. The steamer Chatham is now close to the position of the Yellowstone.

News of the Yellowstone's condition was brought to this port yesterday by the steamer Fair Oaks, who had found the Yellowstone helpless, and taken her in tow, but was compelled to abandon her owing to the Fair Oaks becoming badly damaged, and also to the fact that she was very short of fuel and water.

OUTLINES A NEW COURSE FOR THE TRUST QUESTION

WOULD GIVE THEM CHANCE TO GET IN LINE

In Discussion With Visitors Today, Wilson Says He Would Make It Easier for Big Combines to Conform to the Laws, Rather Than to Start Lots of Dissolution Proceedings in the Federal Courts.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 19.—President Wilson this afternoon declared there is no foundation for the stories that business has suffered through the new tariff law. On the contrary, he told his visitors that small business throughout the country has increased in volume.

The president admitted that certain industries that are dependent upon railroads for equipment orders, etc., suffered a little, but he said he believed that an improvement would be shown soon.

Wilson denied emphatically that he had told anyone that he favored allowing the railroads to increase their rates.

As to the trusts, he explained that his plans contemplate facilitating processes, by which the big combinations can conform with the law, rather than indulge in legal processes to force dissolution.

Attorney General McReynolds, the president pointed out, has not, and will not, abate the laws, but has tried to give the corporations sufficient time to change their business methods, so as not to violate the laws.

The first Klamath county man to become an avowed candidate for office is George Chastain, the popular clerk of the circuit court, who Saturday filed a petition for re-election. Chastain is well experienced in this work, as he served two terms as county clerk. Though a democrat, he was the choice of both parties in his second campaign, being endorsed by the republicans also. He was named by Judge Benson for the present office, which was created by the last session of the legislature.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 20.—Since 5 o'clock this morning not a train has moved on the Delaware and Hudson. All employees except telegraph operators have gone on a strike for better wages and working conditions. A force of 5,000 men is involved. The collieries the company operates will close tomorrow, pending the settlement of the strike. This will lay off 1,500 more men.

BASKETBALL GAME SATURDAY NIGHT

Preparatory to starting on its tour through Yreka, and towns as far north as Roseburg, the Klamath County High School basketball team will play two games with the Klamath Falls team. The first will take place Saturday night at Houston's opera house.

Both teams are practicing hard to get into shape.

The high school team leaves Monday, February 2, for their trip. On the Saturday preceding the boys will play a game with an outside high school team here. Several teams are anxious to come in for that date, among them Yreka, Ashland, Medford and Roseburg.

Railway Mail Exam

The United States Civil Service commission announces that an open competitive examination for railway mail clerk, for men only, will be held on February 21, 1914, for the purpose of establishing an eligible register from which to fill vacancies as they may occur in this position, at $900 per annum. Applicants must have reached their 18th, but not their 35th birthday. Persons who meet the requirements and desire this examination should at once apply to the secretary, Eleventh Civil Service District, Seattle.

The earth and rock taken out of the Panama canal would fill a tunnel fourteen feet in diameter bored through the earth at the equator.

Jails and penitentiaries, formerly regarded as the breeding places of tuberculosis, have generally been greatly improved in this respect. In Germany the mortality from this cause in these institutions is only one sixteenth of what it was fifteen years ago.

The 1,073,338 persons actively engaged in farm work in Ireland on June 1, 1912, constituted 24 per cent of the total population (4,390,219), according to the 1911 census. Of this number 810,503 were male and 262,735 female.

A glass bottle blowing machine invented in Germany has a speed of 2,000 bottles an hour, equal to the work of 250 expert glass blowers.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Editor Republican: Those of your readers who failed to hear Dr. Schafer's lecture on the "American West and Democracy" missed an intellectual treat, which is uncommon in this neck of the woods, and I think I am voicing the sentiment of all who heard him when I say that I am sorry he could not stay longer and give us more such lectures. The term "dry as dust" has often been used about college professors, but while that may be true of some, Dr. Schafer was delightfully different, for his lecture was interesting from beginning to end.

The doctor said "The West was a state of mind, rather than a fixed place on the map—that the seaboard of the Atlantic was once called the West, because it was west from Europe, but the line has gradually moved west until today it includes the stretch of country west of the Sierra Nevadas and Rocky Mountains. At all times, however, the West has signified the frontier of civilization.

The pioneers had to adapt themselves to their environment or go under and the struggles and hardships encountered by those pioneers in their efforts to make good has developed the highest type of manhood in American history.

The ideal expression of American democracy has been that this is a land of opportunities, and this was particularly true while there was a large public domain open for settlement. But since 1892 there has been no more free land worth words, and, consequently, the advice to "go West and grow up with the country" has lost its meaning. With the public land gone, the problem of the jobless and landless man has been thrust upon us, and he stated that right now there are hundreds of thousands of persons who have only a few days provisions between them and starvation. He also stated that there are nearly 2,000,000 children in the United States working long hours in our mills and factories; that those children are not getting the proper chance to develop—mentally and physically—so they are compelled to enter life's work with stunted bodies and minds.

These problems, he said, must be solved, and that they should be solved in the spirit of the West, which is that every person be given a chance. The doctor admitted being one of those who have discovered a future. What that future was like he did not tell, nor did he propose any remedy, only that the solution is in education.

In this I heartily agree with him, for I think it is all a matter of education of the producing classes along the line of their own material interests. This failure to state the remedy was perhaps a disappointment to some of his hearers, but I hope those will continue the lecture in their own mind, and try to work out a solution of their own.

I think you will all agree that our social problems have their root in our political and economic institutions, and if you find that neither the republican nor the democratic party offers any solution, I will ask you to read the socialist platform, and give it your kind consideration.

JOHN AUSTAD.
