NATIONAL PRESS CLUB
OPENS ITS NEW HOME

WASHINGTON, March 20.—The National Press club threw open its doors to the public today. Tonight President Wilson and other notables will be its guests at a house-warming. This club, comprising in its membership local newspapermen, leading Washington newspaper correspondents, and a notable roll of men in high official life, has outgrown its quarters for the second time and tonight's housewarming finds it in much larger and more elaborate quarters than before.

The National Press club is a sort of democratic clearing house for news and social intercourse. Here the correspondents of the "Cross Roads Clarion" can exchange views—and news—with the correspondent of the more or less pretentious "New York Nuggett." Here he can meet the biggest men in the newspaper profession in Washington, and the highest officials. Presidents, senators, congressmen, have been the club's guests. Prominent scientists, politicians, explorers and musicians have assisted in its "hobby night" entertainment. In these affairs the man who might seem high and mighty and far away from the common people drops off the cares of state and business, and jokes and laughs, and, in short, shows that he's a regular fellow.

Already, as at its other quarters, the club has thrown away its front door key. It is always open, and there is generally a group of members there at every hour of the day or night. For the night workers, it is the only place for respite or amusement with Washington affords in the wee sma' hours.

So every morning when the newspaper presses throughout the nation are grinding out the press members' contributions, there is a gathering of correspondents in the big living room for music, song, story and feasting. Its members carry more big secrets every day than any similar size group of men. It's watchword is "the pen is mightier than the sword."

SPORTSMEN OF THE STATE IN EARNEST IN NEW MOVE

There were two big points emphasized by the gathering of the sportsmen of the state at Portland, says Charles F. Stone, who, with Carey M. Ramsby, the other delegate from here, returned Thursday night.

The first is that such a sentiment prevails among the sportsmen in regard to the necessity of conserving the game that within a very short time there will be absolutely no necessity for such a game warden service as there is now in existence.

"The other is that the sportsmen of the state are determined to demand from the legislature what is necessary in the way of measures. The general expression, though, was that the present game laws are adequate."

There were thirty-three sportsmen organizations throughout the state represented at the convention, including some of the most remote sections of Oregon, as far away as Harney county. It is expected that there will be sixty by the December meeting.

The constitution adopted by the state organization divides the state into seven districts for executive purposes. Multnomah county is in a district by itself, while the other counties were grouped according to what the organization considered the most convenient arrangement.

Klamath, Lake, Malheur and Harney counties comprise the seventh district.

The executive board is comprised of a member from each district, and has charge of proposing legislation and looking after the enactment of new laws affecting the fish and game of the state.

Any club may become a member of the state organization by the payment of an entrance fee of $5 and an annual fee of $5. The constitution provides that the first meeting be held in Portland on the first Monday in December, and thereafter on the same date at such place as the delegates to the annual meeting may determine.

The meeting was most harmonious in every particular. None of the past differences which have been affecting the sportsmen were permitted to be discussed. The meeting was attended by all the principal people interested throughout the state, and there were 300 present at the big "beefsteak" dinner at the Portland Commercial Club.

CAN SHIP SEEDS
BY PARCEL POST

According to information just received by Postmaster W. A. Delzell, seeds, plants, bulbs, roots, scions, etc., can now be sent by parcel post. The postoffice department has just issued an order making these admissible to fourth class mail.

These rates apply whether the seeds, etc., are for planting or any other purpose. This is a great reduction in the rate for transmitting these through the mails.

ELKS BAND IS GIVEN A START

The All-Elks band suggestion has been received with great enthusiasm by members of the local lodge, and plans are now under way for the organization of a twenty piece band.

A committee was appointed at Thursday evening's session of the Elks Lodge to have charge of the matter, consisting of J. E. Bodge, Allen Sloan, C. M. Ramsby, Charles Martin, E. B. Henry, A. Y. Tindall, R. E. Mitchell, A. L. Wishard, Marion Barnes, Fred Houston, O. M. Hector, Chas. Mashburn and George Tugnot.

TWO GIRLS TIED FOR COOK HONORS

Some time ago Miss Abbie Carpenter divided her class in home economics into quartets, allowing each quartet to compete in a series of prize luncheons given in the department of home economics.

The last of these luncheons was given Wednesday. Thursday the judges announced the winners, giving, also, the division standing as follows:

First division, Lucille Waldron and Helen Zumpfe; second division, Hattie White, Florence Boggs, Fannie Virgil and Madeline West; third division, Nina Noel, Marie Griffith, Helen Elliott and Vera Schmerser.

Miss Waldron and Miss Zumpfe will each prepare and serve a luncheon in order for the judges to decide the ownership of the beautiful set of cups and saucers given by Miss Carpenter for the best luncheon.

There are about 100,000 timber workers in the state of Washington alone.

WATER USERS' BILL PASSES SENATE

EXTENSION OF PAYMENT TIME WILL PERMIT BETTER CONDITIONS

Administration measure, Soon to Be Before the House of Representatives, Makes number of Provisions That Are of Benefit to the Irrigationist—Abel Ady, Who Was East, Expected Home Sunday.

There is much gratification among the water users as a result of the passage by the United States senate of the bill following its introduction is time for repayment by water users under reclamation projects. The bill, which is an administration measure, is now pending before the house.

Just what changes were made in the bill following its introduction is not known here. Dispatches, however, stated that there were no material changes.

This bill provides that on existing projects, like the Klamath project, the water users will be given twenty years in which to pay the entire balance due. This will be done by annual installments, beginning December 1st, following the issuance of a public notice to that effect.

Under the measure which promises to become a law soon, during the first four years, the annual payments will be 2 per cent of the amount due. The next two years the settlers will make annual payments of 4 per cent, and the remainder will be paid in fourteen annual installments of 6 per cent of the balance due.

The lower payments in the beginning will be a great benefit to the farmers in leaving the money to get stock, machinery, etc., and pay for their property, thus enabling them to meet the larger subsequent payments in much better shape.

The bill as introduced also provides that on new projects, where no public notice has been issued, the water users must pay 5 per cent of the total costs assessed against them at the time of making application for a water right. This was one of the parts of the measure that was attacked.

However, under this method, following the 5 per cent payment, the water user under the new project, does not make additional payment for five years, after which the balance is paid in fifteen annual installments, each of 7 per cent of the amount.

The bill also provides that additional charges, such as for extension of drainage, etc., cannot be added except by the vote of the majority of the water users favoring the expenditure. In case of additional charges, it is discretionary with the secretary of the interior to add the cost to the balance being paid in the annual payments, or allow the water users to pay this off at the end of the twenty years.

According to the senate bill, the secretary of the interior also has the right to make the secretary of the water users association, fiscal agent for the project. In case there is a delay in the making of payments, both construction and operation and maintenance, the bill provides for adding penalties.

One feature of the bill that is aimed at speculation, is the provision that the secretary of the interior will not approve any new project, or the extension of any old one, unless the land holders enter in to an agreement to dispose of all of their lands in excess of one farm unit, at a price to be fixed by the secretary of the interior. In case of a land owner not agreeing to this, his lands will be excluded from the project.

The Klamath Water Users Association has taken much interest in this measure, and has been largely responsible for its introduction at this time. President Abel Ady has been in Washington for several months, working in the interests of this measure, his expenses being borne by individual water users. Mr. Ady is expected home Sunday night.

McCALL-SELLER ENGAGEMENT
ANNOUNCEMENT IS UNIQUE

Before chapel exercises at the high school Friday morning, probably less than six people knew of the approaching wedding of Miss Marjorie Sellers and Max A. McCall. Most everyone, of course, surmised that such an event was scheduled, but certainly was lacking until Instructor E. L. Morrison walked up on the rostrum at chapel this morning, shook hands with Miss Sellers in a way to give the students a glimpse of the diamond on her finger, and offered congratulations.

He was followed by Miss Carpenter and Miss Applegate in neatly phrased best wishes.

Principal Faught, in his morning address, said: "We are not sure of the date—'and that's as far as he got. The student body interrupted with such a mighty cheering that no one could make himself heard. What Mr. Faught meant to say was, 'We are not sure of the date of the debate with Marshfield.'"

Catching the spirit of the occasion,

Miss Saucerman had the school sing "Sparkling Gems." When it was time to march to class room, Miss Louise Benson played Lohengrin's Wedding March, and the students rushed to extend congratulations to their blushing German teacher.

While the announcement, coming in such a novel manner, caused a flurry of excitement that has abated very little during the day, still it was not altogether a surprise to a large number of friends of these popular young people.

MINERS' UNION

FOR A MILLION

COLORADO FUEL AND IRON COMPANY PLAINTIFF

According to the Officials of the Labor Organization, This Is Being Done in an Effort to Offset the Report of the Congressional Committee That Has Been Making Investigations in Colorado.

DENVER, March 20.—The Colorado Fuel and Iron company today commenced a suit in the district court against the national and state officers of the United Miners' Association for $1,000,000 damages.

In this action the charge is conspiracy to paralyze working conditions in the field, thus causing a loss of business. It is understood that three other similar suits are to be filed, aggregating in all a demand for $3,000,000.

Leaders of the union assert that this is intended by the operators to offset the coming report of the congressional committee making an investigation.

ENGLE ASKS $35,000 FROM ALGOMA COMPANY

Through Manning and O'Neill, Former Employee of the Algoma Lumber Company Brings Lawsuit to Recover Large Sum for Injuries Sustained While Working at the Plant Last Summer.

The Algoma Lumber Company is defendant in a suit for $35,000 damages, filed by E. C. Engle Tuesday afternoon. The plaintiff is represented by H. M. Manning and C. M. O'Neill.

Engle lost his left leg as the result of an accident at the Algoma Lumber company's plant, where he was employed last summer. He also states that he has been bed-ridden for eight months as a result, and is suffering from other injuries received at the same time.

According to the complaint, Engle and others were employed in putting up a scaffolding for an elevated railway at the plant. He states that the stringers and bents were not securely fastened, and that when he was pulling to raise a timber by means of a block and tackle, the bent this apparatus was attached to pulled loose and fell on him, causing him permanent injury.
