Claims to Have Answer to the Divorce Problem

United Press Service

CLEVELAND, April 2.—Cleveland, the one city in the United States with the unenviable record of one divorce for every four marriages annually, is now teaching its little girls how to be ideal wives some years hence.

The Marion school, a part of the city's educational system, is devoted to tutoring 14 year old girls on the art of domestic science perfection.

"It's a solution of part of the divorce evil," declared Miss Estella Hanchette, a teacher in charge of the "ideal home" kept by the girls of the school. "Untidy homes are many times responsible for dissatisfied husbands."

The "ideal home" is across the street from the school, in the heart of the congested district. It was once a filthy, unsanitary tenement. Dirt was literally hoed from the floors. Half a dozen layers of old wall paper covered with filth and dirt were taken from the walls. The building was given a thorough scrubbing and then the "future wives" took charge.

They obtained estimates for the painting and papering and every article of furniture from gas stoves to draperies and linen. Miss Hanchette took them to the stores to buy everything. Economy was the first consideration.

The early class cleans floors and windows and sweeps. No girl has enough to do to tire her. Each is taught simple methods of cleaning.

The second class buys and prepares the lunch. The next class eats the meal and the late class cleans the dishes and ends the day in sewing. The classes rotate each day, so that the work is different. The house contains kitchen, dining room, pantry, bed rooms and clothes closets.

"The children are so enthusiastic about their work," said Miss Hanchette. "I am firmly convinced that the future husbands of those of the 'ideal home' pupils who marry, will never enter a divorce court. No man would want to lose a wife whose knowledge of her home, and whose interest in it was a small per cent even, of interest, the pupils now show in the 'ideal home'."

R. A. BOOTH SOON TO VISIT KLAMATH

tural College, Willamette University and Reed College, Portland.

From 1900 to 1908 he was in the state senate from Lane county, the only political office he has previously either held or sought, and he favored progressive legislation, including voting in favor of the submission to the people of the question of the adoption of the initiative and referendum and other popular government measures included in what is known as the Oregon system. He further proved himself not to be a political opportunist, but a man who stood firmly for what his conscience told him was right and against what it told him was wrong without regard to political consequences.

It is generally believed that in R. A. Booth the republicans of Oregon have a Moses who will lead them out of the wilderness of defeat to success at the polls in November. Allied with no clique or faction of the party, and known throughout the state as a man of large ability, splendid character and straightforwardness, he is generally conceded to be the man best qualified to undertake this task.

As indicating his attitude toward labor, it is interesting to note that the Booth-Kelly Lumber company, although employing from 500 to 1,800 men constantly, one of the biggest pay rolls in the state, has never had a strike or any trouble with its employees. Furthermore, these same employees, despite the fact that Mr. Booth has not been actively connected with the company for years, are almost solidly for him, and among his most enthusiastic supporters.

In his platform he advocates among other things, restriction of immigration, scientific adjustment of the tariff based on the difference in cost of production at home and in foreign countries, a system of rural credits under government auspices for farmers, enabling them to borrow money on long time loans at low rates of interest; forest reserves as an asset of the state rather than the federal government, the revenue from them to be used in reclaiming land, endowing schools and building roads; protection from disease and accident, and compensation for injuries to workmen; easier conditions and more encouragement for bonafide homesteaders, nation wide enfranchisement of women, reclamation of waste lands, whether desert or swamp.
