

TO STANDARDIZE TANGO

Variety of Methods to Be Boiled into One

New Yorkers Organize to Eliminate the Difficulty--Other Newsy Notes From Gotham

By CARLTON TEN EYCK
(Written for the United Press)

NEW YORK, April 6.—Enter the disinfected Tango! Solemnly, and with a decorum due their duty to a world suffering from tangomania, a dozen or more of New York's finest and most elite have started the standardization of that terpsichorean tripping that caused girls to leave home, potatoes to issue edicts against it, and press agents of new steps to invade the very sanctum of the Vatican at Rome.

It came because the Bronx girl whose escort lived in Brooklyn, or the fair dancer from Hoboken whose escort lived in Manhattan, or even the husband and wife who happened to be living together were brought to the verge of quarreling and even separation, merely because each happened to learn the myriad methods of dancing the same dance in a different way.

The cry heard so frequently that only by continually dancing together could a couple succeed in going through the maxie, the one-step, the hesitation or the half-and-half without jeopardizing life and limb or friendship, will be heard no more, if the self-appointed standardizers succeed.

This effort to standardize the tango and other new dances so that the man who learns them in Chicago can dance them with the girl from Bliddeford, Mo., just as the man who two-stepped or waltzed in Dallas could two-step or waltz with the Seattle girl, is not a fleeting thing, however humorous it sounds at first glance.

This is shown by the standing of those women who have started the movement.

Included among them was Mrs. Cornell Vanderbilt Sr., Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, Mrs. Oliver Harriman, Mrs. Cooper Hewitt, Miss Maude Wetmore, daughter of Senator Wetmore; Mrs. Oliver Damrosch, Miss Anne Morgan, and other members of the exclusive Colony Club and Parents' Club.

At the first meeting of the "Tango Disinfectors" scores of moving picture slides were shown. First several variations of a new dance were exhibited and then was shown a sort of deodorized variety to be accepted as standard.

The efforts of the "Disinfectors" have been both approved and condemned by tangomaniaacs of the Greater City. Some hail the plan with delight. Others say, "What's the use? It's true the new dances at present require couples to dance together continually, if they dance them at all; but in the regular course of events they will themselves simmer down to a standard just as the two-step and waltz were evolved from the series of dance gyrations that preceded them."

Park Row, New York's "Newspaper Row," is to lose another one of its newspaper families. And the newspaper family which has decided to move will follow the trend northward or uptown. The Sun, which has been in its old family building across from the World at the corner of "the Row" and Frankfort street and a few doors away from the Tribune building at the corner of Spruce street and Park Row, has decided to take newer and larger quarters in the ten-story building at the corner of Pearl and Park streets about a quarter of a mile uptown.

First the Herald and then the Times moved away from Park Row. All the old timers said they couldn't succeed in what they called "way Uptown."

The Herald is at Thirty-fifth and Broadway and the Times at Forty-second and Broadway. Nowadays, neither of these corners is considered Uptown. In fact, with Manhattan pushing itself up to 242d street, these locations now are Downtown.

Necessity is the mother of invention but conscience assuredly is the Nemesis of thrift in Nervous New York, where Speed is king. The sounding of the death knell recently of the county assessors of Oregon in Salem in conference assembled, passed a resolution that all assessors of the state of Oregon shall assess said property at its true cash value, according to law, and believing that such a condition would be much more satisfactory for every interest in Klamath county than under the present system, when the assessment of taxable property is, according to the last state report practically 60 per cent of its cash value, and believing that every interest in said county should be treated fairly and equitably assessed in proportion to each other, the said county court and assessor of Klamath county, working together for the best interests of Klamath county in all respects, have decided to adopt a policy for a true cash value assessment for the ensuing year, and thereafter.

In explanation it may be said that this movement will in no wise increase taxation, but will rather tend to reduce it; that the valuation of the county will be as it should be, and the number of mills on the dollar necessary to raise the needed expense of the county will be lower, accomplishing the same for a less millage in comparison to the present system.

Therefore, as a means to an end, and to assist the assessor in securing the best possible roll and the most equitable assessment insofar as agricultural land, swamp land, timber land and city property are concerned, we have decided and do appoint the following commission of reliable citizens of Klamath county to confer with and assist the assessor in such wise and at such times as he may suggest, the desire being to secure best possible results for the betterment of conditions in Klamath county:

- Charles Drew, Hildebrand, Ore.
- Burrell Short, Pine Grove, Ore.
- James Pelton, Fort Klamath, Ore.
- J. Frank Adams, Merrill, Ore.
- Abel Ady, Midland, Ore.
- Chas. S. Moore, Klamath Falls, Ore.
- C. E. Worden, Klamath Falls, Ore.
- R. N. Day, Portland, Ore.

famous old Fulton Market marks another step in New York's passion for convenience at any cost.

Twenty-five years ago Fulton Market was a busy scene. Then, Madame New York tucked her market basket under her housewifely arm and went to Fulton Market for her groceries and provisions. That was before the elevated connected with Brooklyn Bridge in Brooklyn and when the surface cars had a transfer station nearby.

Today Fulton Market resembles a deserted ship's hull which rests, rattle and rotting, on a beach.

The City Fathers, branding the once busy market building as a "blot on the face of the city," have declared it must be wiped off. Nowadays, when subway cars and elevated hurtle through tunnels and above ground at almost lightning speed to get New Yorkers "some place else," and when speed is uppermost in everyone's mind, New Yorkers don't go to market.

Instead, they shoot down to the street in elevators, rush from their apartments to the nearest of the many delicatessen shops, which are everywhere, to buy their groceries and provisions.

They haven't time to do otherwise. They haven't time even to cook their groceries and provisions, so they buy them already cooked at the delicatessen.

WEYERHAEUSER DIES THIS A. M.

PASADENA, April 4.—Frederick Weyerhaeuser, lumber king, and one of the richest men in the world, died at 8:30 this morning. Death was due to capillary pneumonia, and he had been sick for two weeks. Deceased was 78 years old.

"I worked for Weyerhaeuser for eighteen years preceding the World's Fair in Chicago, and I consider him one of the grandest men in the United States," said Mike Doohar, a well known local timber man today. "In those days, his interests were not so large, and all of my dealings regarding driving, logging, contracting and cruising were carried on with him personally. I left him only because of the panic of '93, when the low price of lumber made a logging contract with the company anything but profitable."

The life of Weyerhaeuser is a portrayal of a marvellous rise from an alien to one of the most powerful men in the world. When he reached Wisconsin as a youth he was just over from Germany, and unacquainted with the language and customs of the new world. He was first employed in the dredging of the Mississippi river.

Some time after this Weyerhaeuser invested his savings in the Beef Slough company, working to pay part of his interest. The first year the company put in 15,000,000 feet of logs into the water, and a year later put in 100,000,000 feet without difficulty.

This enterprise continued to increase its business, and Weyerhaeuser invested his profits in other concerns, which seemed, under his magic touch, to prosper beyond all calculations. As a result, at the time of his death he was a powerful factor in the lumber world, and was connected with the largest and most stable concerns in the country.

OAKLAND AFTER THE EGG TRUST

OAKLAND, April 6.—In a vast cooperative movement to give the storage egg a black eye, the people of Oakland, through the Chamber of Commerce, have placed an order with Petaluma chicken ranchers for 350,000 dozen eggs a month.

The eggs, the order specifies, must be absolutely fresh, and so guaranteed, and Petaluma has answered that this will be the case.

Practically every grocer in Oakland has agreed to the plan, and the eggs will be distributed among them on arrival, each taking what he can handle.

HUERTA INSISTS THAT TORREON IS STILL IN DOMAIN

TELLS O'SHAUGHNESSY VILLA IS DRIVEN BACK

Federal Forces Said to Be Entrenched in Hills Near San Pedro de Las, and Will Soon Be Captured—Villa, With an Additional Force of Rebel Troopers, Is Going to Insure the Capture.

MEXICO CITY, April 4.—Huerta, evidently believing he is facing fate, is still steadfastly denying that Torreon has fallen, and that General Velasco was defeated.

The manner of the dictator indicates that he expects, but does not fear, the worst. Obviously, he is trying to keep the news of the fall of Torreon from the people as long as possible.

All the wires to the north have been cut. The newspapers have been forbidden to publish anything regarding the fight.

"Torreon has not fallen, the federals are driving Villa back," said Huerta, with a smile, when he met Embassy Secretary O'Shaughnessy in a cafe last night.

CHIHUAHUA, April 4.—A message received today from Cuertel says that General Velasco and his federal troops are entrenched in the hills near the San Pedro de Las colonies, and is completely surrounded.

General Hernandez wired that he could capture the force.

To make the capture certain, General Villa is leading another force, moving toward that point.

GRIFFITH'S HAT IN THE RING; IS OUT FOR JUDGE

ANNOUNCEMENT OF CANDIDACY FILED TODAY

Former County Judge Comes Out for the Democratic Nomination, and Stands for the Payment of the Just Debts of the County, Completion of the Court House on the Present Site, Etc.

The latest in headgear to be added to the heap already in the county's political arena bears the brand of J. B. Griffith, ex-county judge. Saturday afternoon he filed announcement of candidacy for the democratic nomination as county judge.

For some time Griffith's name has been mentioned as an opponent to Worden by those who are "ferniest" the policies of the present administration. Griffith held aloof for some time, though it is known that he has been strongly urged to make the race.

With D. B. Campbell undeniably out by reason of his refusal to consider the matter, it is understood that still stronger pressure was brought to bear upon Griffith yesterday afternoon and evening, causing him to file today.

The office of county judge will not be a new one to Judge Griffith, as he held the office four years preceding Judge Worden's administration. It was in his administration that the court house fight was commenced, and his court levied the first court house assessment and accepted block 10 in Hot Springs addition as a court house site.

"If I am elected I will use every effort to put the county's paper at par by the application of business methods to the business of the county," said Griffith today. "I am in favor of paying off the just indebtedness of the county if the injunction does not hold this up."

"I am also in favor of the completion of the court house on the Hot Springs site as economically as is consistent with good business policy, the keeping up of the county roads already built, and the construction of others as fast as the resources of the county will allow."
