Mediators Are Now All Assembled at Niagara Falls, Ready to Commence Their Deliberations — Believed That Huerta Forces Will Make One More Stand Before Retreating to Defend Mexico City

JAUREZ, May 21.—General Felipe Angeles today wired constitutional headquarters from Paredon that the federals are evacuating Saltillo.

The evacuation started after only a short skirmish with Villa's troops.

The federals are retreating southward. There are no details as to their route, but it is believed that they are going to San Luis Potosi, 200 miles across the desert.

Military experts believe that San Luis Obispo is the mecca for all the federal troops in Northern Mexico now. They say that the federals will make their last stand there, before falling back to the defence of Mexico City.

This is first definite word received today of conditions at Saltillo.

Engineer Team Made Up of Good Players

Just because the Klamath Falls team made such a wonderful showing at Yreka last Sunday, a good many are under the impression that the game here Sunday will be a walk-away for the locals. Glance over the line-up and you will find that the engineers have a team that will make our boys play every inning of the game.

Billy Malin, captain and pitcher, was captain and pitcher for the Hollywood, Calif., champions.

Tuttle, at first base, is the same Tuttle who played around here for some time, and is well known as a great stickler.

Hincks, at second, was formerly the star second sacker for the University of Michigan team.

Crane, shortstop, is another college star.

Cunningham, center field, was with the unbeatable Signal Corps team of Los Angeles.

Joe Ball, third base, has played enough ball in Klamath Falls to be well known to the fans.

Ginsbach, right field, is noted for a heavy stickler.

Hincks and Cunningham represented California in the all-star game at St. Louis in 1904.

While the local team feels sure of victory Sunday, it will be a hard-fought one.

SELLS WILL NOT COME HERE UNTIL MONTH OF AUGUST

LANE REPLIES TO CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

All Hope of Opening Rivers on Klamath Indian Reservation to Logging This Year Are Blasted by the Last Announcement From the Bureau of Indian Affairs Regarding Plans of Commissioner Sells.

Despite the urgings of the Klamath Chamber of Commerce and other organizations, and the personal work of the Oregon congressional delegation, there is absolutely no chance of Williamson and Sprague rivers being open to logging before August, if at that time.

A telegram just received from Senator Harry Lane by Secretary Wyldie of the Klamath Chamber of Commerce, states that Indian Commissioner Cato Sells is at present in Oklahoma, and that he will not visit the Klamath reservation until August.

This telegram was received from Lane, in answer to telegrams sent to the various congressmen and senators from Oregon, and to the Indian bureau. The telegrams urged those addressed to use their influence to secure the personal inspection of Williamson and Sprague rivers as early as possible.

The closing of the rivers, at the request of sportsmen who complained that logging interfered with trout fishing, has caused much idleness among lumber interests, and concerns purchasing Klamath Indian timber, believing they could drive the logs on the rivers to the mills, find themselves unable to touch the timber without building a line into the woods.

WATSON RESIGNS SUPERINTENDENCY OF RESERVATION

QUITS WHEN HIS SUCCESSOR GETS HERE

Head of the Klamath Reservation Hints That Severing of Connection Is the Result of Internal Politics. Affair at School This Spring Is Known to Have Caused Some Trouble.

"You can say that I have sent my resignation as superintendent of the Klamath Reservation to the Indian bureau, and that it has been accepted. This becomes effective upon the arrival of my successor," said Indian Agent Edson Watson over the long distance telephone this morning, in answer to inquiries.

Watson's resignation comes on the heels of persistent rumors that he was slated for removal since early in the spring, and have attracted no little interest.

Regarding the matter, Watson was reticent. He stated that he had asked for a full investigation into his administration, and his friends state that he is resigning rather than cause any friction, but is determined to have his acts fully looked into by the department.

Watson's friends claim that the move is largely a political one, due to the change of administration, and they say that all over the United States the new administration in the bureau of Indian affairs is causing vacancies and removals.

Early in the spring, Principal Sims of the Indian school is alleged to have given some Indian youths severe beatings, and this aroused the ire of the Indians. When Sims wired his resignation in, the Indians also wired to Washington, asking the bureau not to accept the resignation until an investigation had been made.

H. G. Wilson, supervisor of Indian reservations in Oregon, came in right after this, and spent some time on the reservation, making an investigation. Some state that this investigation was largely responsible for the present state of affairs, as Sims was under Watson, but Watson holds that this is a minor matter in the case.
