

CATTLE MARKET FIRM THROUGHOUT

STEADY TO STRONG PRICES COMMANDED BY SHEEP—HOGS ARE NOT OF BEST QUALITY JUST NOW, SAY OFFICIALS

PORTLAND, Sept. 21.—Cattle liquidation was comparatively light last week. The market was firm in all departments.

Best light steers sold Monday at $7.35, and the bulk of steer sales was from $6.75 to $7.10.

The swine receipts were inside of 3,000 for the week. The average run of hogs at this time is not a prime quality, due to the high prices of feed.

A good sized run of sheep and lambs, with steady to strong prices on yearlings and ewes, the former being up 5 cents, at $5.30, and a bunch of ewes selling at $4.50.

What Started the Present War

FIRST INSTALLMENT—"A Turn of the Wrist and a Twitch of a High School Boy's Finger."

By WM. G. SHEPHERD (United Press Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, Sept. 21.—(By Mail to New York)—What started this war in Europe?

Everybody knows that millions of men are lined up to kill each other; that the civilization which Europe has been slowly building since the dark ages has been thrown to the winds.

It will take a hundred years for history books to give the news. As General Fred Funston told me just as I was hurrying away from Vera Cruz for London: "There's only one bigger newspaper story that could happen on this earth, and that would be another planet approaching ours with an inevitable collision two weeks distant."

What started the biggest event the world has ever known? The answer is: One little lead bullet from a revolver in the hands of a Serbian high school boy.

It's hard to find enough to say about this one lead bullet. It went into the head of an archduke, as he rode in his automobile. It sped through the chancelleries of Europe. It circled about thrones. It entered the bed chambers of the world's kings, emperors or czars and drove sleep from the eyes of statesmen.

It sped into millions of homes and brought sorrow and death. Oceans of tears of women and little children it created. It flew into the bourses and money markets of the world, and cut their nerves.

To understand the situation in Europe before this bullet was fired, imagine, if you can, that every item of civilization—everything that is good—homes, science, art, music, surgery, education, culture, peace—had all been done up in one huge package and hung, by a slender thread, over a deep precipice.

For years this package has hung this way. The winds of war have often threatened it, but the statesmen of Europe have steadied it, and have strengthened the hold until the storm has passed, time after time.

And then along sped this one lead bullet, fired by a high school boy named Gabriel Prinzlip. It cuts the rope. The crash will be heard throughout centuries.

Where Prinzlip is now is a secret. Most probably he is dead. From the day he was seized by the crowds in the streets of the little town of Sarajevo and dragged off to jail he has been out of sight.

It all happened on Sunday morning, June 28. King George of England was living in Buckingham palace, in London, enjoying the social season. In far away St. Petersburg the czar of Russia was entertaining Poincaré, the president of France. The emperor of Austria had gone to his summer home for his vacation.

What's happening there seems small enough at first. A little crowd of citizens go down to the depot to see a special train come in; it bears the Archduke Francis Ferdinand, who if he lives, will some day be emperor of Austria and king of Hungary.

With the archduke is his wife. They have left their four little children at home in Vienna, and have come to Sarajevo, a little town in Bosnia, to pay a royal visit.

Europe and all humanity might well have kept their eyes glued to the automobile which is to pass through the badly paved streets of Sarajevo at 10 o'clock in the morning.
