Tuesday Jack Moore, the son of Mr. John Moore, reached the initial milestone of life. In honor of the occasion, Mrs. Rufus S. Moore entertained a number of young people and their mothers at "The Maples," her pretty West Side home. The children enjoyed to the utmost the romp on the spacious lawn, now covered with russet maple leaves, and the other juvenile games. At the conclusion of their play, a luncheon was served, a feature of the feast being the birthday cake, with a solitary candle showing the sum total of the years of Master Jack's residence upon this terrestrial sphere. The little guests were Freddie Goeller, Innes Roberts, Beatrice Walton, Margaret Cummings, Catherine Walton, Charles E. Cummings, Zephia Rogers, Jean Rogers, Henrietta Rice, Helen Mason and Helen Shive.

Members of the Art Needlework Club will meet next Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. George Chastain, on Third and Lincoln streets.

Members of the Happy Hour Club were delightfully entertained by Mrs. Loy Hilyard at her home at Ninth and Pine streets Tuesday afternoon, her guests being Mrs. Robert A. Emmitt, Mrs. M. P. Evans, Mrs. S. B. Turner, Mrs. Leo Houston, Mrs. R. C. Shipley, Mrs. Martin, Mrs. William P. Johnson, Mrs. G. V. Walters, Mrs. R. J. Sheets, Mrs. Ray Telford, Mrs. Curtis Heldrick, Mrs. Harry Richardson, Mrs. K. D. North and Mrs. Charles McWilliams. The afternoon was enjoyably spent in needlework and conversation, and a dainty luncheon was served by the hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Oden left during the week for Tennessee, and on Wednesday afternoon Mrs. Oden was tendered a surprise party by a number of ladies from the Pine Grove district, where the Odens resided. There was never a more surprised woman than Mrs. Oden, when her neighbors called in a body, prepared to spend the afternoon, and carrying with them the ingredients for an unexpected repeat. Needlework and the exchange of reminiscences made the afternoon hours glide by all too swiftly for the happy assemblage. Late in the afternoon the lunch baskets were emptied, and the table literally groaned with the sumptuous repast served, as each guest had vied with the other in conjuring with her culinary art some epicurean delight. Attending the farewell surprise party were Mrs. J. S. Mills, Mrs. Miller, Mrs. Bert Hawkins, Mrs. L. O. Brown, Mrs. Henry Grimes, Mrs. G. H. Hilyard, Mrs. S. P. Short, Mrs. W. B. Short, Mrs. Albert Miller, Miss Nora Miller, Miss Jennie Icebice, Mrs. S. E. Icebice and Mrs. Louis H. Bath.

Mrs. Thomas Hampton was hostess to the Tuesday Bridge Club Tuesday of this week, and there were two tables. The afternoon proved highly enjoyable. A luncheon was served by the hostess.

Mrs. C. C. Hogue and her mother, Mrs. M. P. Kelly of Albany, who has been visiting here this summer, left Sunday morning for the latter's home in Albany. After a few days' visit there, Mrs. Hogue will go to Portland as a delegate to the State Grand Lodge of the Pythian Sisters, to be held there. From Portland Mrs. Hogue will go to San Francisco, to visit her daughter before returning to Klamath Falls.

The first dancing party of the season will be given on the night of October 13th at the White Pelican Hotel, by the hotel management and guests. Invitations will soon be issued. The hop is given in response to much demand from the dancing people of the city.

The directors, superintendent and teachers of the Klamath Falls school district were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Hogue at their home on High street Saturday evening, there being present Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Dunbar, Mr. and Mrs. Marion Hanks, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Applegate, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Dezell, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Momyer, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Barton, Miss Augusta Parker, Miss Cole, Miss Clara Elmer, Miss Alice Pool, Miss Rachel Manneman, Miss Claudia O'Loughlin, Miss Gertrude Seeley, Miss Lena Stoecher, Miss Edith Soule, Miss Winifred Keyes, Miss Edna Wells, Miss Ethel Gross, Miss Laura Rice, Miss Helen Paxson, Miss Lulu Wattenberg, Miss Pearl Talley, Miss Nellie McAndrews, Miss Mary E. Stewart, Miss Ida Momyer, Miss Golden White-nack, Miss Georgia Porter, Miss Alice Blackford, Mr. D. C. Moseis and Mr. P. L. Fountain. One of the features of the evening was "The Greatest Show on Earth," a menagerie travesty that convulsed all. A number of interesting guessing games were played and the fortunes of each guest, in poetry, were given them. Miss Augusta Parker sang some well received solos, and piano numbers were rendered by Miss Hortense Hogue. During the evening refreshments were served.

Friends of Mrs. H. C. Chamberlain spent a most enjoyable afternoon at her home one day this week, needlework being the chief diversion, and refreshments were served.

school students will not be allowed to compete against the grades, but will be in a separate class.

The contest will be divided into two classes. In the first class no one but high school students will be allowed to compete. In the second class no one but grade pupils can compete.

Like awards will be given to each division.

All letters must reach the Chamber of Commerce, Klamath Falls, not later than 12 o'clock on the noon of December 1st. The announcement of the winners, and the awarding of the prizes will take place December 31st.

The number system of judging will be used, so that no judge will know to whom the letter belongs at the time it is being graded. The names of the judges will be announced in the course of a week or so.

The time to get busy is now. It doesn't make any difference to whom you write. If you want to tell President Wilson about the good things of Klamath county, that's all up to you. It isn't likely any letter will be recalled, unless it be by special request of the writer.

Send your letters to the Chamber of Commerce. All of the Klamath county newspapers are interested in ascertaining the best letter writer, and the letters will be published in these papers.

Fort Fair Is the Best of Them All

In the agricultural department there was a creditable display of hardy vegetables, grains, grasses and forage crops. Excellent honey in the comb and strained, attested the fact that the Wood River Valley is adapted to bees. The schools also had splendid exhibits.

The fancywork department was one of the most attractive at the fair. There was all manner of women's needlework art displayed, including some almost priceless pieces from 75 to 150 years old.

The residence of Harvey Scott, five miles north of Fort Klamath, burned to the ground Saturday morning at 4 o'clock. Mr. Scott was not at home, but was in the mountains as a guide to a party of hunters. Mrs. Scott and two grown children, with Dr. Griffith and Mrs. Griffith, who were guests, were in the house. Fifteen minutes after the discovery of the fire the house collapsed, so the inmates barely escaped with their lives and with but little clothing.

A few sacks of flour was all that was saved. A new piano and all furniture was lost. There was no insurance. Some mail for government road camps was burned.

Mr. Scott's residence is known as the Wayside Inn. It is the last stopping place north on the road to Greater Lake. Mr. Scott had enlarged his place this summer for the accommodation of the traveling public. His loss is heavy. Relief funds and supplies were immediately raised by the people of Wood River.

Even Russians Astonished by the Czar's Troops This Time

Orthodox Priests Have Worked the Soldiers Into a Terrible Machine, a Religiously-Frenzied Army Fighting What It Believes to Be a "Holy War"

PETROGRAD, Oct. 5.—After the manner in which Japanese soldiers proved so superior to Russians in the Russo-Japanese conflict, it is difficult, no doubt for people to understand the seemingly wonderful improvement in the effectiveness of the Russian war machine as being demonstrated in the present war.

Even members of the foreign quarter here, who have made Petrograd their home for years, could at first scarcely believe that the army which little Japan whipped was breaking up Emperor Franz Josef's army of more than a million men. It was hard to believe that this same Russian army was storming everything before it, with reverses few and comparatively unimportant. But they soon realized the three answers.

Russia has benefited vastly by her mistakes in the Russo-Japanese war; the fighters in the rank and file know what they are giving up their lives for—for the Slav race; the priests of the Orthodox church have worked the army up to a pitch of religious fervor and enthusiasm, by making war, for Russia, a holy war.

Acting under orders from the holy synod in Petrograd, the entire priesthood of the country for weeks before the war broke out, devoted almost their sole attention toward stimulating a zeal for war. The peasants, it must be remembered, are very largely under the influence of their spiritual advisers.

Germany has been held up to execration as the sworn foe of the orthodox church, and this feeling has gained as eager adherents of war the common soldiers and the peasant classes. The pan-Slavic ideal has added to the supporters of the government in its warlike attitude, the middle and better educated classes.

These two things, more than anything else, are what have united Russia and ended, at least temporarily, the threatened internal strife. Every body of marching troops is preceded by a priest of the orthodox church, who, with his flowing beard and long black garment, is a striking enough figure. The priest carries a cross, or is attended by a cross bearer, who bears the burden of the holy lance for him.

The military bands play sacred music alternately with the barbaric march music that suits these warriors of Tartar blood.

It is not merely a war, it is a holy crusade on which the soldiers of Russia feel that they are engaged. In the forts of the fortified towns, wherever troops are assembled or moving, the religious element is very much in evidence; the priest plays an important part as the officer in the preparatory stages, at least, of the campaign.

Nor will the majority of the priests be content to confine their administrations to the preparations for war. Many go right into the fighting lines to spur on and encourage their spiritual flocks and to offer the dying the last consolations of religion on the battlefield.

These priests in Russia are of the people, and they feel with the men in the ranks to a degree astonishing to Western onlookers.

Altogether an impressive spectacle, this Russia under arms.

They do not look like barbarians, these soldiers of the czar; they are mostly simple-minded, docile peasants, full of religious ardor, which will turn them into fanatical fighters when the decisive moment arrives.

They may be slightly inferior in training, but they are the best raw material of any country in Europe, and the hard training of the war will transform them into a host of the most formidable troops in the world.

Mrs. H. Arnold Jackson of Boston is the woman golf champion of the United States for 1914, and the winner of the Robert Cox cup, emblematic of the championship. This cup has been sojourning in England for the last year, whether it was taken by Miss Gladys Ravenscroft. It will remain in the custody of the Oakley Country Club, near Boston, for the ensuing twelve months.

In a final round that was a real match every inch of the way and which was not decided until both balls were in the cup on the eighteenth green on the course of the Naasau Country Club, Mrs. Jackson defeated Miss Elaine V. Rosenthal of Chicago by 1 up.

It was Mrs. Jackson's second victory in the national championship, for in 1908, when she was Miss Katherine C. Harley, she won the title at Chevy Chase. It is doubtful if any woman golfer has ever had so clear a title to the highest honors of the year as that which Mrs. Jackson earned. Last spring at the Greenwich Country Club she won the women's Eastern championship, which was decided by a medal play test, and she won the national title after a week of match play. So in both phases of the exacting game of golf Mrs. Jackson has showed herself to be the pre-eminent woman golfer of the year.

Our Weekly Health Talk

By DR. R. H. DANIELS, Editor "The Hygienist."

Typhoid fever is a germ disease; its various symptoms are the result of the successful invasion of the body by the typhoid bacillus. However, just as in the case in all of our common germ diseases, a breaking down of the natural disease-resisting power of the body must precede the actual disease. While the germ is necessary to the disease, these things which get the body in such a condition that the germ may successfully attack it, are also important causes of the disease.

The man who is going to have typhoid fever in the spring is laying the groundwork for the disease months before the attack, during the winter. Typhoid fever originates in the small intestine, hence we must look to abuses of that organ as its first cause. For months preceding the attack the typhoid fever victim-to-be is over-eating; he is eating more food than he can digest and use up; he is also eating indigestible foods, too much fried foods, often too much sweets. As a result of these harmful habits of eating there is more or less irritation to the small intestine from the fermentation and putrefaction of the unused food.

As the spring comes on and the warm weather makes it impossible for the body to use up the usual amount of winter food, the man who is going to have typhoid fever falls out down on his heavy foods; thus he continually increases the amount of unused food in the intestines and the irritation from the fermenting and decomposing food. After the intestines and the body at large have become gotten into a state of lowered resistance in this way, the germ is taken in with food or water, and finding conditions favorable for its growth and development, takes up its abode in the intestine, and brings about the actual.

SOME MINOR WAR NEWS FROM EUROPE

LITTLE STORIES FROM THE FRONT THAT ARE COMING IN THROUGH THE CAPITALS OF THE NATIONS NOW FIGHTING EACH OTHER—SOME ARE TRIVIAL, BUT ALL ARE INTERESTING AT THIS TIME.

United Press Service
FOLKSTONE England, Oct. 5.—The following is told by a wounded British officer just returned from the front, of an episode of the fighting by the British in the trenches near Cambrai.
"It was dinner time. But in this war there is no dinner rush from 12 to 1. The shells continued to roar, but fifty yards behind the trench, screened by a belt of trees, the battalion reserves had their fires alight and employed their time cooking dinner for the battalion. That was all very well. But fifty yards of shell-sweep ground between left the men in the trenches a play-way from their dinner. Fortunately the front was clear for a short time of hostile infantry. An officer called for volunteers.
"Immediately a host of volunteers sprang up. Away they raced to the belt of trees and returned triumphant with mess tins riddled with shrapnel bullets and some of their number on the ground, but with dinner for the famished battalion. The men who fetched David the water from the well of Bethlehem were no mightier men of valor."

United Press Service
LONDON, Oct. 5.—Mrs. Strange, stewardess of the Princess Ladies' Golf club, Mitcham, has no fewer than twenty-one near relations on active service with the fleet. Her husband, a pensioner, is captain-steward at Davenport barracks. She has six brothers afloat, two brothers-in-law and twelve sailor first cousins. Eight of her uncles are naval pensioners. Her father, Thomas Rees of Davenport, is a Crimean veteran, and one of her grandfathers also served through the Crimean War.
By treating young chickens with high frequency, high voltage currents of electricity, a London experimenter has made them grow more rapidly than those of the same age reared without the treatment.

It is said that about 1,400 earth tremors were felt in Japan last year.
