PETROGRAD, Oct. 15.—The general staff has announced that it will not start the Russian campaign in Poland until there is some definite conclusion reached in the battle against Austro-German forces, now raging from Warsaw to Vistula.

The war office is convinced that German spies are at work here. There is strong reason to suspect that previous statements have been transmitted to Germany, giving information regarding Russia's plans.

It is admitted that the most of the Russian army is engaged in the battle front and in Poland.

The czar feels that if he breaks the German line in Poland, the way is clear for an advance upon Berlin.

United Press Service

BERLIN, Oct. 15 (wireless via Sayville).—The Russians were defeated near Schwydt, with a loss of 1,500 prisoners and twenty cannon.

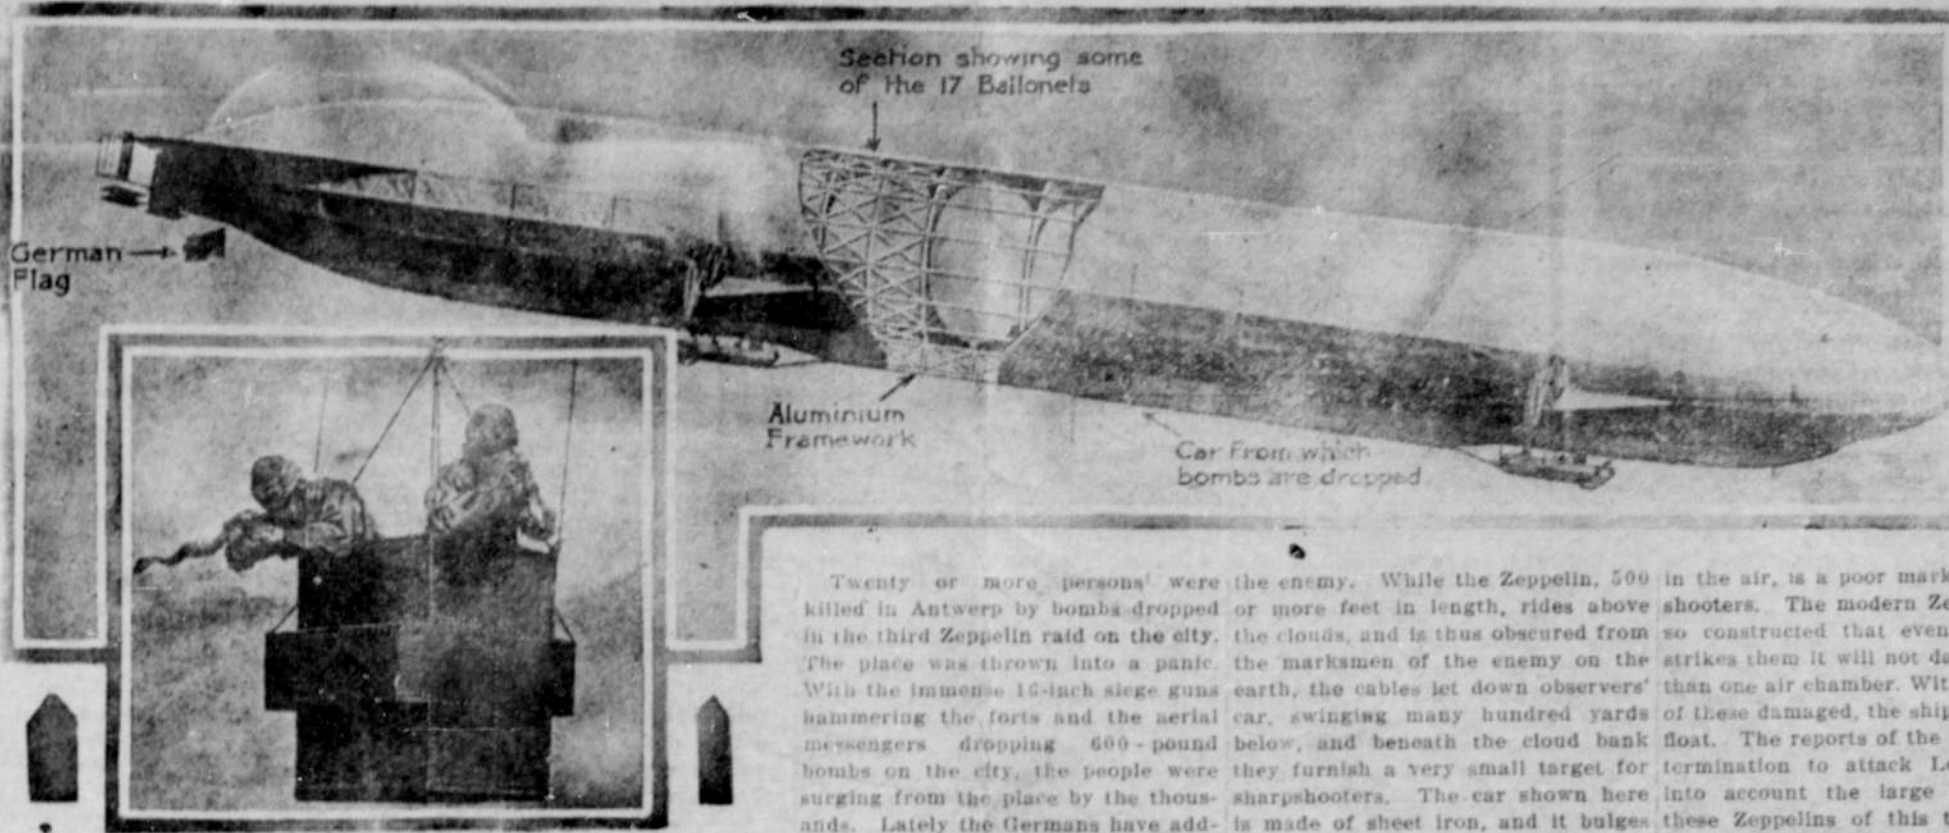

The repulsing of the Russians by the Germans in the south has brought the Southern Poland fight back to Warsaw and the Vistula.

Type of Zeppelins Which Were Engaged in Storming Antwerp

Twenty or more persons were killed in Antwerp by bombs dropped in the third Zeppelin raid on the city. The plane was thrown into a panic. With the immense 16-inch siege guns hammering the forts and the aerial messengers dropping 600-pound bombs on the city, the people were surging from the place by the thousands. Lately the Germans have added a novelty to their Zeppelins. They have arranged an armored car to be dropped by cables for observation of the enemy. While the Zeppelin, 500 or more feet in length, rides above the clouds, and is thus obscured from the marksmen of the enemy on the earth, the cables let down observers' car, swinging many hundred yards below, and beneath the cloud bank they furnish a very small target for sharpshooters. The car shown here is made of sheet iron, and it bulges on either side to form a protection against bullets from below. A car like this, moving rapidly, very high in the air, is a poor mark for sharpshooters. The modern Zeppelins are so constructed that even if a shell strikes them it will not damage more than one air chamber. With seventeen of these damaged, the ship might still float. The reports of the Kaiser's termination to attack London take into account the large number of these Zeppelins of this type. It is said to be his belief that he could terrorize the British capital if a dozen or more of them bombarded the city.

War Talk in Congress

Congressman Urges Preparation

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 15.—

The recent plea for strict neutrality in speech and action, issued by President Wilson, was ignored on the floor of congress today by Congressman Augustus P. Gardner of the Sixth Massachusetts district. He introduced a resolution for an investigation of this nation's preparedness for war, and passed some reflections on one warring nation.

"It is true with respect to this European war," said Gardner, "that my views are not neutral. I am entirely convinced that Germany's cause is unholy, and that it is a menace to the principles of democracy.

"Furthermore, I believe the god of battles will visit defeat upon the Germans.

"But no matter which side wins, we must remember that ever since the beginning of time, victorious nations have proven headstrong and high minded. We must begin immediately to reorganize our military strength if we expect to be able to resist this high-handedness when the day of necessity arrives."

Gardner presented the resolution providing for a commission to be appointed by the president to investigate this country's readiness for war.

"The Mutual Girl and Her Auntie"

WHERE SALES REALLY TAKE PLACE—It is easier to make goods than it is to sell them. I know a man who has been in the manufacturing business all his life, and he says it took him some time to find this out. Any man with money can buy machinery and hire men to run it and make goods, but it does not follow because he can do that that he can sell those goods. His money is of no use if he cannot sell those goods after they are made. He said it took him some to find out that the making of the goods is the least. When you are manufacturing goods you are dealing both with men and metals, and you can put a thousand more men to work and make more goods. But when you cross the line and attempt to sell those goods you will meet a different proposition.

When you make a sale of anything, whether in a retail store or on the road, no matter what it may be, that sale does not first take place in the order book or over the counter—in the pocketbook or in the check book.

But every sale, whether it be a paper of pins or a grand piano, first takes place in the mind of the person who buys the goods.

A lawyer is as much of a salesman as a business man, and should use the same tactics as any other man who is selling things, because he is always trying to sell the judge and the jury his side of the case.

When you put this matter of influencing the human mind on such a broad plane you can see that in nearly all of our relations of life we are using the principles of advertising and salesmanship.
