

Scene and Heard

CLAIRE LOVELL

Americans really need a dress code

What has happened to style in the U.S. of A? Maybe we could even call it a "dress code." Ha.

Old people like me mostly just cover their bodies with something warm and comfortable — usually slacks, a T-shirt and a sweater with a rain hoodie and gloves for cold weather. What we see on the street is something else again.

Very few people "dress up" anymore. Clothes look mostly like they were the first three pieces picked out of the laundry basket. No matter if they are mixed summer and winter wear or in any way coordinated. Important men on TV and elsewhere have quit wearing ties. Too many of them choose scruffy beards or bald heads. What a picture!

There are other pictures everywhere, too. Tattoos, that is. They're unattractive, but I don't lose hope. Maybe a time will come again when ties and shirt-tails are in; pants are up to the waist and caps are on so that the visor shades your eyes. I guess it's all a form of rebellion.

Personal pick

My candidate for president is Bill Whittle, a truly conser-native speaker, educator and student of history. I came upon him by accident, trying to find a watchable program on TV. He is so informed and so inspirational.

It was truly interesting when he described how George Washington would dress if he were president today, in an Armani suit and $900 shoes, etc. I had never heard of him. He told us the things that are wrong about our country and what should be done to fix them — all so reasonable.

He talked nonstop for about an hour, no ums or ers, just supreme confidence. Who is he?

Signal disaster

The changes at the traffic light on Broadway and Columbia Street are pretty much a disaster. Why were they altered anyway since a four-way stop has always worked best for us? The pedestrians, especially visitors, walk against the signal and seem to think there are no rules of any kind. I guess hospitality is the name of the game.

Hidden message?

It was somewhat disconcerting to find my last column with the obituaries over a black band. Are there any subtleties here?

Local poet

Recently, poring over some parts of my library, I rediscovered Jim Barker's book of poems, "Winds Variable." It was good for me that some of the earliest ones had rhyming lines because that's the kind I like best. Although I have written some free verse, it never meets with my approval since rhyming lines and strict meter have always been my preference.

Most of Jim's work is without rules. Remembering him, his looks and mannerisms; his home; and his family, reading his poetry reveals a complicated, sensitive man with a gift for self-expression. He painted, too, and traveled some. Many of his works are about Seaside and its environs. Below is one of his expressive word pictures of spring.

Spring Song

Suddenly from glooming winter bogs, infectious, laughing thunder of the frogs.

From Earth, high sky and blossom blowing bough hear the happy shout, "Spring's here now!"
When sung so gaily, nothing can be wrong in ecstatic thrilling of the redwing song, and glowing from April's spring warm hills, the golden trumpet of the daffodils.

Laugh Line:

There was the person who sent 10 puns to friends with the hope that at least one of the puns would make them laugh. No pun in 10 did.
