Sales of medical marijuana nixed in downtown core area

By R.J. Marx
Seaside Signal

On Monday, June 22, the Seaside City Council approved a plan to prohibit medical marijuana dispensaries in the city's downtown core. After a year-long moratorium on dispensaries, the vote completed the process of excluding portions of the city from the sales of medical marijuana.

The legislation sets restrictions on where medical marijuana dispensaries can operate and allows the city to distribute business licenses to dispensaries, according to City Manager Mark Winstanley.

City staff reviewed a number of different options for outlining the exclusion area, before determining an area between a line 600 feet north of the Broadway right-of-way that extends from the east side of North Prom to the west side of North Roosevelt Drive, and a line drawn 600 feet south of the Broadway right-of-way that extends from the east side of South Prom to the west side of South Roosevelt Drive. Councilors said in earlier meetings that the exclusion zone would maintain a "focus for families" downtown, and that it "made sense" for sales to take place outside of downtown core.

Tuesday's vote was adopted without discussion by the council. "It's been a long road, counsel," said Mayor Don Larson, addressing City Attorney Dan Van Thiel. "And I thank you sincerely."

Mayor Don Larson, Council President Don Johnson, and councilors Jay Barber, Randy Frank, Seth Morrissey, Tita Montero and Dana Phillips all voted in support of the amendment.

After its passage Monday night, the ordinance will have a 30-day enactment period in the event of an appeal.

Currently the city is not addressing sales of recreational marijuana, which becomes legal on July 1.

Chapter 118 of state law provides legal definitions for marijuana, dispensary, cardholders and license and requires all dispensaries to be registered in accordance with Oregon Revised Statutes and applicable Oregon Administrative Rule. Registration by the Oregon Health Authority, however, does not guarantee a dispensary is permitted to operate under applicable local municipal regulations.
