Oregon now has five marine reserve sites established

After many years of planning and public involvement, the Cape Falcon Marine Reserve site went into effect on Jan. 1.

This site is located in the ocean just off the northern coast, between Falcon Cove and Manzanita, Oregon and is an area dedicated to conservation and scientific research.

Just like parks and protected natural areas on land, there are multiple benefits of protected areas in the ocean. They conserve ocean wildlife and biodiversity, including various local invertebrate and fish species. Protected areas can also extend benefits to marine birds and mammals that use these areas.

These sites also serve as living laboratories, where we can learn about marine reserve protections and Oregon's ocean environment to help us maintain our seas for future generations.

The Cape Falcon site includes a 12.4-mile marine reserve, where all removal of marine life and ocean development is prohibited. Adjacent to the marine reserve are two marine protected areas. The marine protected areas still prohibit ocean development, but allow some limited fishing activities.

The marine reserve is located just offshore, roughly bordering Oswald West State Park. The north boundary is located at the north end of Falcon Cove Beach. The south boundary is located north of Manzanita, in the Neahkahnie Beach area. The Shoreside MPA is located off of Falcon Cove, stretching along the shore from the north boundary of the marine reserve to just south of the intersection of Falcon Lane and Tide Ave.

The Harbor to celebrate 'La Fête 2016'

"La Fête 2016" takes place Saturday, Jan. 30, from 7 to 11:30 p.m. at the Masonic Temple, 1572 Franklin Ave, Astoria.

This will be the second annual La Fête, fashion show fundraiser for The Harbor. Emcees, Daylight Cums and Ginger Vitus, two of Astoria's most fashionable drag superstars will be hosting the event. Twelve local designers have been challenged to put together two outfits using only items found at Déjà Vu Thrift store. Their models will stomp down the runway in a competition to crown Astoria's next top designer. The two winners of last year's La Fête, Becky Tonkin and Ryan Saunders will join Jeanine Fairchild and Judith Stokes at the Judges table. All attendees will be able to vote for their favorite styles for people's choice winner. Many local restaurants have generously donated food and beverages. There will be a hosted bar and items for auction. Midway through the event we will have a performance by Jessamyn Grace. After the show will be the after party. Come dressed in your best and celebrate Astoria's stylistic creativity, have fun and dance the night away!

All proceeds will go to The Harbor, Inc. The mission of The Harbor is to assist in the intervention, recovery, and well-being of survivors of stalking, domestic and sexual violence.
