“We’ll be focusing on system development,” Royle said. “Power, sewer, water and roads. I’ve been working with the city for a number of months on what that would like.” Traffic remains a concern, she said. Urban renewal funds could generate money for future improvements. Funds from the sale of existing school buildings could add facilities to the campus plan.

“Many of those things will be able to be accomplished before the opening of the school,” Royle said. “It’s part of the continued development of the community to be a great place to live. It doesn’t stop with us. We have a lot of great things to look forward to.” The building master plan will be discussed at the March Planning Commission meeting. Architects anticipate the design phase to reach in June, when construction could begin. The campus is slated for opening in the fall of 2020.

her husband, a Seaside native, when they were both living in Portland. (His mom now lives in Gearhart.) The couple enjoyed spending time at the beach; two years ago they decided to move to Seaside and make it their full-time residence. Recently Kloster had the idea to produce a coastal women’s expo and hold it at the Seaside Civic and Convention Center.

“It’s a one-day event,” Kloster said. “We’ll have a little bit of everything of interest to women — fitness, lifestyle, mindset, local artisans, nonprofits, activity groups, business owners, inspiring speakers, a charity raffle and even an awards ceremony.” Women vendors will showcase unique products and services from the Oregon coast. “It’s a celebration of creative entrepreneurs and the womanly spirit. It’s a family friendly event open to all ages,” she added.

Kloster expects a turnout of established business owners, entrepreneurs, Pacific Northwest enthusiasts, and “Basically anyone looking to have fun and be inspired.”

“The Oregon Coast Women’s Expo is a brand new event,” Kloster said. “I’m a businesswoman and I enjoy bringing more people to the coast. I love creating events and awareness and empowerment around women in business.”

Sponsors, volunteers, and exhibitors are still wanted. The Women’s Expo takes place on Sunday, Feb. 18, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Seaside Civic and Convention Center.

Local artist melds old methods with new emotion

One day she came across the work of Zemula Fleming, a painter, sculpture, and mixed media artist who works in beaded mosaic.

“She was an inspiration to me,” Seely said. “I bought nine of her pieces.” All along she had been collecting wooden boxes and colored beads for which she now she had a purpose. “A lady in Newport showed me some techniques on adhering the beads to the boxes,” she said. “I visited Alaska where I learned how to weave cedar baskets. I began doing things with wire and beads.”

Not long after, Seely had an epiphany she wanted to focus exclusively on bead boxes, a direction she’s taken for several years.

“The boxes are surprisingly durable,” Seely said. “I test them out on my 3-year-old niece.” All the same, she said people tend not to keep things in them as much as collect them and regard them as talismans.

“I use a lot of the color green,” Seely said. “I like colors found in nature.”

Seely has been represented by the Fairweather Gallery since 2015.

Seely and her husband live in Seaside where she also has a studio. When she isn’t working, she enjoys walking and spending time with her beautiful dog, Liberty Belle.

“She is a trained pheasant hunter,” Seely said. It’s easy to imagine one day how feathers may find their way into Seely’s enchanting and imaginative work.

“Fresh Greens” opens at Fairweather House and Gallery on March 3. The opening reception is from 5 to 7 p.m. There will be live music by “Shirley 88.” The naturalist and biologist Neal Maine will give a talk about the local habitat at 6 p.m. In addition to Seely, featured artists are Karen E. Lewis, Fred Lukens, Michael Muldoon, Carolyn McPherson, and Richard Newman. The event is free and open to the public. For more information, contact Fairweather House and Gallery at 503-738-8899. The gallery is located at 612 Broadway in Seaside.
