Christine Kende works in glass using a layering process, fusing each layer as she goes until she achieves her desired effect. She holds Fine Arts degrees in music and tau. She has found her voice in glass, which she enjoys because it combines the physics of glass with art.

Fay Stross was inspired to learn to paint after studying art therapy and is now focusing on watercolor after studying other media, taken many courses and has a master's degree from Antioch University.

J.R. Moyer gathers wood from the beach and rivers in the area and turns them into items of beauty to let each piece show off its simple yet complex pattern, its unique character and history.

Carol Braden is known for her decorative guitars and has been a professional since 2008, showing in contemporary galleries nationwide.

Jen Crowe is a multi-disciplinary artist working in natural fibers, encaustic paint and metal, sterling silver as her favorite for jewelry.

Clear off kitchen and bathroom counters. A coffeemaker is just about the only thing to consider leaving out on the counters. Put everything else out of sight
