Seaside firefighters on the return

Seaside Signal

Seaside firefighters Chris Dugan, Jenson Segui and Max Savage are heading back to Seaside this afternoon following a week in California assisting with the Kincade Fire in Sonoma County.

The fire, which began Oct. 23, is 80% contained, the California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection reported Monday. Residents are returning to their homes as evacuation orders are lifted. Crews will continue their progress as they mop up and construct more containment line.

Active for 11 days, the fire has covered almost 78,000 acres of vegetation.

Along with a department brush truck, the firefighters joined the Columbia County Strike Team No. 4 to fight the fire, Chief Joey Daniels told the City Council on Oct. 28.

Dugan, Savage and Segui left Seaside last Wednesday for Sonoma County and spent their entire week assisting crews from California and the region with the 78,000-acre blaze.

According to Seaside

Public Information Officer Jon Rahl, the firefighters deployed with the Columbia County Strike Team #4.

The crews were part of 15 strike teams from across Oregon that were mobilized four days after the fire began.

As of Monday, nine of the 15 total teams that demobilized and have arrived back in Oregon or are currently en route back home. Six Oregon crews moved to the Ranch Fire in Tehama County which started Nov. 3.

Deck installation offers a salute to veteran

Members of “Team Depot” converged on this home on North Wahanna Road in Seaside this week for a labor of love. They responded to a request for assistance from a local veterans’ group to come to the aid of a Vietnam veteran in need.

On Monday morning, Team Depot co-captains Jeremy Gleason and Sandie Laccinola were joined by Mitch Thielen, Daniel Fox-Telford, Anthony Beltran, Mindy Mead and Tony Poelstra in replacing a deck in need of repair, providing materials and labor at no cost.

“The deck was in disarray,” Gleason said. “Part of it was sunken in and falling apart. They had caution tape around it. He couldn’t cross the front to walk around to his utility room.”

This is co-captain Sandie Laccinola’s third major project with Team Depot, which reaches out to local communities and helps those in need. “We’re always looking for projects and the more we can do to help the community, the better,” she said.

“Anytime we can get out as a team and do something for a community, it’s just awesome,” Gleason added.
