

Dr. Reginald Baugh

Ann Arbor, Michigan
June 12, 1956 — Jan. 21, 2021

Dr. Reginald Baugh passed away on Jan. 21, 2021, after a courageous battle against Lou Gehrig's disease. He was 64 years old.

Dr. Baugh — his friends called him "Reggie" — was the middle son of Gerald "Jerry" Baugh and Virginia Cooper Baugh. His childhood in Oregon was rich with nature, achievement and strong family relationships.

Reggie attended Broadway School in Seaside, Astoria Junior High School,

Astoria High School and West Linn High School. He was a scholar athlete who played, and lettered, in football, basketball, track and baseball.

In 1974, the University of Iowa recruited him to play basketball. There, he lettered two years before graduating one year early in 1977. In 1981, Reggie graduated from the University of Michigan Medical School, and remained there to complete his otolaryngology residency.

Dr. Baugh began his professional career as the first African American faculty member at the Texas A&M College of Medicine. Then, before the age of 40, he became a senior vice president for Cigna insurance.

Eventually, however, Dr. Baugh returned to his first love, patient care and academic medicine. He accepted a position as vice chairman of the Department of Surgery at Texas A&M College of Medicine. Dr. Baugh finished his career as tenured professor of surgery and assistant dean of admissions at the University of Toledo College of Medicine.

During his career, Dr. Baugh also served the public as a committee member on the U.S. Food and Drug Administration's otolaryngology device evaluation panel. He also was a technical expert on the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services's 2017 tonsillectomy guidelines.

Dr. Baugh also helped develop the three national otolaryngological multi-specialty medical guidelines for tonsillectomies, Ménière's disease and benign paroxysmal vertigo.

But for all that Dr. Baugh accomplished, the roles he cherished most were that of

"Dad," "Pop-pop" and husband to his wife of almost 40 years, Bobbie Hafford Baugh.

His spirit lives on in his two sons, Brandon and Aaron; daughter-in-law, Yanika; and granddaughters, Yara and Ava. He is survived by his mother, Virginia Cooper Baugh; brothers, Gerald "Andre" Baugh and Ronald Baugh; sisters, Renée Baugh and Michelle Baugh; nephews, Roderick Baugh and Steven Baugh; niece, Stephanie Baugh; and extended family members and friends.

Lawrence E. Reierson

Monterey, California
Feb. 27, 1934 — March 7, 2021

It is hard to summarize a life lived as fully as Lawrence Reierson's, who died March 7, 2021, at home in Monterey, California.

Born Feb. 27, 1934, and growing up in Elsie, a small logging community in the Nehalem Valley, Larry was one of six children, with four older sisters and one younger brother.

His early education was in a one-room school. A crack shot, Larry hunted elk and deer, learning basic life skills that helped feed the family during the Great Depression. Spearfishing salmon in the Humbug Creek and picking elderberries provided supplements to their diet.

His Uncle Albert, living in a shack on the Reierson homestead, made his living as a bootlegger. He was full of intriguing stories. When Larry was a teenager, bragging to his uncle about soon becoming "a loggin' man like my Pappy," Uncle Albert said, "Look here you little s--t, you get the h--l out of here; you don't belong here. You have more to offer!"

Although very confused and disheartened at the time, Larry would soon find it would be some of the best advice he ever got.

After getting over the shock, Larry joined the U.S. Navy. He served in the Korean War, and when discharged, went to work for Tektronix as an electronic technician, a skill he gained in the Navy.

He never graduated from college, but was admitted to a master's program in organization development at Pepperdine University, based on his life experience.

His first marriage ended in 1969, after 12 years.

He is survived by one stepdaughter, Candalee, and two biological children, Careen and Lorrie. His stepson, Lonnie, preceded him in death in 2010. There are four grandchildren and one godchild, Rabeca Hand.

Leaving Tektronix after 20 years, he went to work for Weyerhaeuser in management development, shifting to Pro-Log, a Monterey electronics company, becoming general manager, where he liked to say his real job was keeping the owners from killing each other.

By this time he had remarried; this time, successfully, to Star Van Valkenburgh. They were happily married for 52 years, completing projects, including building an off-the-grid house in Boulder Creek, California.

Leaving Pro-Log in 1986, Larry started a management consulting company, Saltwater Institute. This job required extensive traveling in the U.S., Europe and Asia training executives of Fortune 500 companies in techniques to better manage their companies for employee satisfaction and company success. Larry, a natural people-person, taught leaders how to "make organizations safe for humans."

In retirement, Larry continued to be active in community organizations, serving on the board of the Kernes pool, as a member of St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church and as president of his homeowners association, where his skills in management proved useful.

Larry mused frequently how unbelievable it was for a logging camp kid to end up as a corporate executive and international management expert. He enjoyed playing his guitar, owning a 1960 Corvette and writing poetry. He was quick to smile, to laugh and, mostly, to listen.
