

Concert: Community to come together through music

Resources, hosted concerts on their property with a view over Haystack Rock, Noack said. "Not only did they host the concert, they financially supported the concert, brought in food and beer trucks, set up a picnic area with lawn games for while people are their pre or post concert meal, set up hay bales for scattered seating and most incredible, carved trails through the woods complete with tree identification signs and lighting."

This year's concert had originally been planned for the timberlands again. But getting to the concert site would have required the audience to ride in shuttles up the mountain, Noack said, not a viable option amid the pandemic.

The Noacks scouted the area and selected Lesley

Miller Dunes Meadow Park in Gearhart.

"I was thrilled when Hunter and Lori scouted it out, agreed the location would be feasible and put it on their schedule," Alix Goodman said. "My husband loves classical music and thought being able to experience it, casually and in a beautiful setting."

The Goodmans and others, including longtime In a Landscape supporter Mort Bishop, set their sites on bringing the experience to Gearhart. Their team of supporters enabled the Friday night concert, Noack said, and Greenwood Resources provided funding for Saturday's event.

"The city of Gearhart has been supportive of the process once they understood the nature of our concerts," Noack said. "These events are really more than just concerts. They are a way to encourage people to immerse themselves in nature, an introduction to live classical music for man and a safe way for people of all different backgrounds to come together in an uplifting and inspiring community gathering of locals, part-time residents and some visitors."

A large number of tickets has been held for purchase by Gearhart residents only, Noack said. An additional 20 tickets will be given to the Gearhart Fire Department to distribute to locals unable to purchase a ticket.

The Gearhart Fire Department will receive a portion of the revenue from the Aug. 13 concert. "When we learned that the Gearhart fireman's annual ball was canceled for a second year, we wanted to find a way to show our support of the community," Lori Noack said.

get more authorization," Owen said.

The tournament, which was canceled last year as a result of the pandemic, is the largest program for the chamber. In 2019, the tournament featured about 1,600 teams playing among three divisions.

"The volleyball event is not only one of the biggest things for our city but for our chamber," Owen said. "It's four days, with anywhere between 7,000 to 10,000 people a day. It's incredible how much impact that has."

The Hood to Coast relay returns Aug. 27 and Aug. 28, with 12-member teams running 199 miles from the top of Mount Hood to the beach. The relay team lottery has filled its limit, with 1,050 Hood to Coast running teams and 400 Portland to Coast Walk teams.

Hood to Coast will have a runners' party at the beach, Owen said, with a beer garden hosted by chamber volunteers.

Protocols: Case count going down residents 16 and older have received at least their first dose of the vaccine. Once the county hits the 65% mark, it will be moved back into the low-risk category.

Once the state meets a threshold of 70% of the eligible population being vaccinated, there will be new risk framework that changes restrictions for businesses and organizations.

"We're getting close," Penrod said. "It is good news to see that not only are our cases per 100,000 going down, but also that our test-positivity rate is also going down."

Children between 12 and 15 are now eligible to receive the vaccine. The hope, Penrod said, is that it will become available to 8- to 11-year-olds during the summer.

Superintendent evaluation

The board shared the results of their annual superintendent evaluation. Penrod's evaluation focused on three goals: increased communication with all stakeholders; supporting staff and equipping them with training and the right processes to effectively provide comprehensive distance learning and hybrid learning for families; and completing the new campus and selling the old school buildings. The board determined her efforts were effective in each category, and they provided justifications and examples to support their determination.

According to board president Mark Truax, the board notes "that 2020 has been a year of epic proportions in organizing the campus relocation while navigating through the COVID-19 pandemic and believes Superintendent Penrod has done a great job in serving our district."

Last day will be full day

At the request of Principal Juli Wozniak, the board approved a minor calendar change so Pacific Ridge Elementary School has a full day of instruction on June 17 as opposed to a half-day of instruction. This will enable both the morning and afternoon cohorts to attend the last day of the school year. Sixth- through 11th-graders will still dismiss at 12:45 p.m.
